LINDY'S STAND CHEERS FOES OF ARMS SALE

Famed Flier Favors Modified Embargo, Unlimited Export Of Defensive Weapons.

STILL CLAIM VICTORY

Repealists Cling to Claim of 65 Votes; Opponents Predicting Gains.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Isolationist senators, encouraged by the support of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, prepared today for a "tremendous fight" against repeal of the arms embargo.

In his second radio speech on the United States' position in the European war, Lindbergh last night aligned himself with the opponents of embargo repeal to the extent of advocating a modified embargo on arms and munitions. He favored the unlimited export of defensive weapons.

"If we repeal the arms embargo with the idea of assisting one of the warring sides to overcome the other," he said, "then why mislead ourselves by talk of neutrality? Those who advance this argument should admit openly that repeal is a step toward war. The next step would be the extension of credit, and the next would be the sending of American troops.

Isolationist senators were greatly encouraged and claimed that the country's reaction to Lindbergh's arguments would win them more votes in the senate.

Administration leaders doubted that it would and still claimed 65 votes, 17 more than necessary to pass the president's program.

In proposing the unrestricted sale of defensive armaments Lindbergh admitted that it was difficult to draw the line between defensive and offensive weapons, but said that it was no more difficult to do "than it is to separate munitions of war from semi-manufactured articles, and we are faced with the problem today."

"But there are plenty of clear cut examples," he said.

"For instance the bombing plane and the anti-aircraft cannon. I do not want to see American bombers dropping bombs which will kill and mutilate European children. But I am perfectly willing to see American anti-aircraft guns shooting American shells at invading bombers over any European country.

UPHOLD WAR

Poll Reveals Three-Fourths of British For 'Carrying On.'

LONDON—(U.P.)—A poll by the British Institute of Public Opinion indicated that three-fourths of the British electorate favors continuance of the war, it was learned today.

The poll was undertaken Oct. 1 at the government's request, it was said, and in reply to a question asking in effect whether they wanted the war continued or immediate peace, one-fourth wanted peace or had no opinion, while three-fourths wanted the war continued.

Wine for The Poilus---A Nazi Souvenir

The French soldier must have his wine, and here, in one of the army ration storehouses behind the Maginot line, Poilus draw their daily ration. Man at right is passing out bread.

French soldiers are clustered about the fenced-in spot where captured German land mines are kept until they can be destroyed with safety. The mines were captured in the Saarbruecken area where French troops have been most active since the outbreak of hostilities on western front. The French sometimes use pigs to ferret out these buried death traps.

SEEKS LINK IN 'PERJURY WAVE'

Ashland Grand Jury Recessed; Judge Waits For Affidavits From Highway Heads.

ASHLAND — The Ashland county grand jury, called to consider 11 cases yesterday, recessed until Monday morning to permit the state highway department to send affidavits which led to the dismissal of a civil service employe, and which Judge H. E. Culbertson believes may be linked with a "wave of perjury" in the county.

Yesterday Judge Culbertson charged, "perjury in this county is so prevalent that it is difficult for citizens to secure justice."

He specifically cited the cases of Ray S. Reinhardt, 35, former manager of the Ashland branch of the Mansfield Provident company, who has been cited on five charges including embezzlement, forgery and operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent, and of a dismissed highway employe, Robert S. Greenlun.

The court said in Greenlun's case, it had come to his attention that the affidavits which caused the employe to lose his job had been signed by a justice of the peace and a constable at Brunswick, near Cleveland, after Greenlun was said to have aided in breaking up a speed-trap at Brunswick.

Judge Culbertson said today probably neither Col. R. S. Beightler, Ohio state highway director, nor his assistant, H. G. Sours, would be asked to appear before the grand jury. In a telephone conversation he told them he was largely interested in having the affidavits brought to the grand jury for consideration.

In his charge to the jury Judge Culbertson said in the Reinhardt case, it would have been impossible for forgery to have been committed if there had not been collusion with some notary public, and that when a notary public accepted names of persons he knew did not exist, he was guilty of perjury.

Board Sets Up Extensive Drive for School Levy

Distribution of Thousands of Pamphlets, Scores of Talks Planned to Win Continuance of 3-Mill Tax.

A campaign almost as extensive as the one for the $550,000 school bond issue last year is planned by the Mansfield board of education for the renewal of the three-mill school levy which will be voted on Nov. 7.

Thousands of pamphlets will be distributed throughout the city, speakers from the board of education, schools and P. T. A. will take the levy proposal to organizations and precinct workers will conduct a "get-out-the-vote" drive.

The entire campaign will stress the fact that the levy is already on the tax duplicate and will not increase taxes.

Speakers and pamphlets will point out the city's schools receive $170,000 annually from the levy and if that amount is lost the schools will be forced to close in March for lack of funds.

The pamphlets will include a sample ballot containing the levy issue, a chart showing the sources of school revenue, and a page of information concerning the operation and financing of the schools.

A number of Senior high school pupils will speak before social and civic organizations on the levy.

The issue on the ballot proposes continuance of the levy for five years. The levy, which has been paid for 15 years, costs 30 cents on each $100 worth of taxable property.

Fire Siren Roars 22 Minutes, Delays Cossacks Concert

There was a strange "prelude" to the concert of the Don Cossack chorus last night at Senior High school auditorium when the building's fire alarm system was accidentally set off, delaying the concert.

For 22 minutes the fire siren roared over the audience in deafening volume, while the city fire department raced to the building and then had to squirm through hundreds of cars jamming streets in the immediate vicinity of the building.

School authorities said today that the alarm could be set off from any one of a number of alarm boxes that are located in rooms and halls but it can't be shut off until the fire department arrives and locates the box that has been set off. The alarm automatically registers at No. 1 fire station.

The alarm began intermittently last night, and then came on steadily at 8:05 and was not shut off until about 8:30.

This was the second time that the alarm was set off accidentally within a year, school officials said. The last time it took more than an hour to locate the trouble.

METERS PAY $56,154

YOUNGSTOWN — (INS) — Parking meters installed in downtown Youngstown grossed $56,154 in their first year of operation. Traffic Commissioner Clarence H. Coppersmith revealed today. Maintenance, collection and clerical expenses were approximately $400.

NOT 'SULKING'

U. S. Lacks Official Request To Mediate In War.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The White House emphasized today that President Roosevelt and his administration "do not want to be put in the position of sulking in their tents" in dealing with the international situation.

At the same time, Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early said no official appeal for American mediation in Europe's war had been received from Germany. This was taken as a clear indication that this government would continue to ignore inspired press reports of Germany's desire that the president act as peacemaker.

Early then pointed out that the latest Berlin dispatches quoted German sources with denying earlier reports that Germany wanted Roosevelt to step into the European situation.

WRIT GRANTED, WINS FREEDOM

Loudonville Driver Victor In Jail Sentence Fight.

ASHLAND—Clayton Bowen, 22, of near Loudonville, who was sentenced to county jail for non-payment of a $15 fine and costs two weeks ago after he had been convicted on a charge of reckless driving in the court of Justice of the Peace G. M. Garn, was released today and the case dismissed on a writ of habeas corpus.

Bowen appealed the case after his conviction, contending that since he was to be committed to prison, he had a right to a jury trial, and that he had not waived that right when he appeared before Garn and therefore the justice of the peace had no jurisdiction over him.

DEFIANT FINNS STILL WAITING

All Civilians Made Liable to Military Duty; Moscow Conference Resumed.

HELSINGFORS—Anxiously waiting details of the progress of Moscow negotiations, Finland today rushed ahead with defense preparations, placing the country on a virtual war footing.

All civilians were made liable to national service under an emergency decree by President Kyosti Kallio, and civil servants were ordered on a war basis.

Helsingfors was one-third empty, some 100,000 residents having evacuated.

All sales of spirits—in this, the only country besides the United States ever to try prohibition—were prohibited. Big dugouts, for anti-air raid protection were hastily constructed at fourteen points in the capital.

So far, Finland remains in the dark as to the progress of the negotiations in Moscow between Dr. Juho Paasiviki and Russian premier-foreign commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov.

TURKISH ACCORD NEAR

MOSCOW — (AP) — Russia and Turkey are at the point of concluding their long delayed friendship treaty, it was understood today.

The treaty was expected to safeguard Turkey under its agreements with Great Britain and France, from the possibility of having to go to war with Russia, and it was expected either to include, or to be accompanied by an agreement on the status of the Black Sea-Balkan nations.

COUNTY KILLS CROSSING JOB BY 2 TO 1 VOTE

Commissioners Doom Route 30 Plan After Reconsidering Financing Angle.

INSIST ON 5-YEAR BASIS

Stewart Swings Over to State Proposal, Mitchell And Hout Vote No.

By a vote of two to one, Richland county commissioners today had doomed the proposed $600,000 grade-elimination on route 30-N at least for another year.

After it appeared that the commissioners might change their minds on the proposal and agree to the state highway department's financing plan, the board late yesterday rejected it in an unexpected and final move.

C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board, and Ray Hout voted against the two-year financing plan proposed by the state and Guy Stewart, the third commissioner, voted for it.

Send Resolution to State.

A copy of the resolution showing the vote will be sent to Murray D. Shaffer, division state highway engineer at Ashland.

The proposal called for a $50,000 contribution to the project by the county with the funds to be provided over a two-year period.

Commissioners had agreed to provide that amount but only on the basis of a five-year period and on the condition that the state finance or help finance nine other smaller jobs in the county. The highway department rejected the five-year financing plan but agreed to take care of the nine Season's Lowest Temperature, Killing Frost Forecast.

Another killing frost, and maybe the coldest weather of the season, is in store for the Mansfield area tonight.

The forecast was for fair and colder with heavy to killing frost. Sunday will be fair and slightly warmer.

Light rain fell late yesterday in the city and was followed immediately by a sharp drop in temperature to 32 degrees, the freezing mark.

Although it may have seemed colder this morning than yesterday, the temperature today was six degrees above yesterday's low of 26, coldest of the season.

The 24-hour average was 44. 10 degrees below normal. Yesterday's high was 56.

STEAL $125,000 IN UNSET GEMS

Bandits Kidnap Salesman On Busy Corner. Flee With Diamonds.

CINCINNATI—(INS)— Police today pressed a vigorous search for three bandits who kidnaped a New York jewelry salesman and robbed him of 300 unset diamonds valued at $125,000.

In full view of scores of pedestrians, two of the bandits accosted the salesman, Sereno P. Davis, 42, at a busy intersection. They forced him into an automobile. Davis was released a few blocks down the street after the men had taken four wallets and a brief case containing the gems. The robbers escaped through a swiftly organized police radio car blockade.

Britain Admits 2nd Major Loss In Sea Warfare

Admiralty Announces Torpedoing of $10,000,000 Royal Oak; Reports 370 of 1,200 Aboard Saved; Vessel One of Seven Largest In Fleet.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—With an apparent loss of at least 700 lives, the 29,150-ton British battleship Royal Oak was sunk, presumably by a German submarine, today.

A statement by the British admiralty late this afternoon said: "So far as is known, the Royal Oak survivors are about 370."

The Royal Oak, one of the finest ships of the line, carried a complement of officers and men estimated at approximately 1,200.

The apparent loss therefore was far greater than aboard the British aircraft carrier Courageous, Germany's previous major naval victim of the new war. A total of 518 officers and men were lost aboard the Courageous.

First estimates of the Royal Oak's complement ranged between 1,000 and 1,150.

At the time of the admiralty's statement regarding survivors, however, the list of officers and men had been estimated at 1,200.

Britain's jubilation over the sinking of three German submarines yesterday turned to deepest gloom at this smashing triumph of the Nazi underseas fleet, for the famed Royal Oak, modernized veteran of the battle of Jutland and Spanish civil war, was one of the seven largest war craft in Britannia's navy.

A communique announced: "The secretary of the admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. S. Royal Oak has been sunk, it is believed by U-boat action."

A heavily-armed craft of 29,150 tons, she is in the second class of British battle wagons, ranking only below the Nelson and Rodney.

The aircraft carrier Courageous, torpedoed and sunk a month ago with the loss of 50 lives, was a 22,500-ton ship.

The Royal Oak was a veteran of the World war, having been launched on Nov. 17, 1914, not long after the conflict broke out. Costing somewhat less than her four sister ships, the Royal Oak was worth, when built, $12,300,000. She was refitted between 1922 and 1924.

A list of the Royal Oak survivors will be issued as soon as possible, the admiralty announced.

Relatives Await News.

As word of the disaster to the navy spread through the country, thousands of wives and other relatives of the crew flocked to the admiralty and newspaper offices anxiously awaiting the first news about the dead.

No further word, however, will be given out for the time being, the admiralty said.

It was assumed that the battleship was with other units of the British grand fleet on blockade patrol duty in the North sea, somewhere east of Scotland.

WAR ANALYSIS: Poles Blame Machine Army For Swift Defeat

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following analysis of the defeat of Poland by Germany in 28 days is based upon a report of the Polish general staff which has reached Paris for the study of the Allied general staffs. The United Press was permitted to read the report.

PARIS—Germany's 28-day conquest of Poland was a victory of machines over men.

Five things made it possible:

1. Errors by the Polish general staff.
2. Germany's 12-to-1 superiority in war materials.
3. The unseasonable drought which kept Polish roads from becoming the quagmires in which Polish military leaders had hoped the German war machine would bog down.
4. The suddeness with which Germany struck.
5. The German "fifth army" within Poland—the 800,000 members of the German minority who performed espionage duties for the reich. The spectacular success of German air raids early in the war was attributed to this espionage service.

Those are the conclusions reached by high Polish army authorities themselves who escaped to France and since have completed a study of the German campaign.

The report, which gives a thorough picture of German tactics, methods and material, has been turned over to the British and French general staffs for their guidance in the event Adolf Hitler

Cossacks Thrill Capacity House With Symphonic Choral Music

By JANE WILLIAMS

Thirty men who served in the Imperial army of Russia under the Czar—28 of whom were officers—stood on the stage of Mansfield high school auditorium last night and gave out choral music such as Mansfield seldom if ever has heard.

The Don Cossack chorus, under the leadership of its diminutive conductor, drew a capacity house as it opened a new season of the Mansfield Civic Music association. The 1,045 members of the association and members of Civic Music organization in other cities filled practically all the 1,135 seats in the auditorium.

Dressed in the peace-time uniform of the Cossacks — scarlet-striped blue trousers, belted Cossack blouses in black and black Russian boots— and standing rigidly erect like soldiers on review, this remarkable organization of White Russians, sounded like a symphonic arrangement played on a great pipe organ.

The chorus is said to carry the highest tenor falsetto in the world, and in the song of "The Red Sarafan" and again in the Mohammedan Prayer one tenor voice sounded like a thin, thread-like flute, calling the desert men to worship.

The program of music was one of amazing range in tempo and theme, for the songs ranged from a prayer for the native church of Russia, through the Rachmaninoff "Terlude" to the ringing songs

News Never Takes A Holiday

NEWS never takes a holiday. . . . In fact, news is as certain as death and taxes. It keeps on happening while people are asleep or away on week-ends.

Which is one reason why so many newspapers issue Sunday editions. A newspaper office is like the postoffice to some extent—if there is a day's layoff the news piles up when it isn't delivered promptly as it is received.

After Saturday, Oct. 28, the news will not pile up again in the News-Journal office for on Sunday, Oct. 29, the first Sunday edition will be issued, and it will carry all of the local and national news right up to press time.

Then too, never in history of newsdom have readers been so "news conscious" and vitally interested not only in what is going on at home, but in the world at large. This is due to the fact that the world moves more rapidly and hectically, and because the facilities for gathering news over the face of the globe have increased miraculously. The headline stories on the front page may have come by wireless, cable, air or telephone, while even the pictures are transmitted by air waves across the world.

With all these modern means at its disposal, the News-Journal enters the Sunday field Oct. 29. Watch for a Sunday paper with all the latest news.

BERLIN: Nazis Call Battleship's Sinking Start of Big Scale War

(By International News Service)

BERLIN—Flushed with victory on the sea as exemplified in the sinking of the giant British battleship Royal Oak, Nazi Germany stepped up preparations for total war "wherever opportune" as consultations went forward with Soviet Russia under the terms of the Moscow-Berlin agreement.

From this moment onward it can be assumed that the reich, geared at last to complete conflict now that all avenues of peace have been closed, will strike at her enemies anywhere and everywhere the opportunities presents itself.

The Russo-German consultations are still being confined to diplomatic channels, but will later be narrowed down to a precise understanding "on the scope and method of mutual endeavors."

Consultations between Berlin and Rome are continuing as well, and their progress will be guided by developments.

Sinking of the Royal Oak, coming so soon after Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's rejection of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's peace offer was regarded in Berlin as the signal that war in earnest had begun.

A German U-boat sank the British aircraft carrier Courageous soon after the opening of hostilities and German naval and aerial activities in the North sea have been more or less continuous.

But the fact the Royal Oak

PEACE PUZZLE REMAINS CHIEF MART HANDICAP

Leading Issues Back Away Moderately In Light Trading Session.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — The European war-peace puzzle remained as the principal stock market handicap today and, while weakness was absent in most cases throughout the brief session, leading issues inclined to back away moderately.

Exceptional lightness of selling was seen as a negatively encouraging factor by boardroom observers. Transfers for the two hours of around 300,000 shares were the smallest for any day since the outbreak of general hostilities abroad.

While sinking of the important British battle ship Royal Oak by German submarines was seen as an indication the overseas conflict may be picking up momentum, peace talk would not down in financial quarters and most speculative contingents were disposed to keep commitments light at the approach of the week-end recess.

On the home front industrial progress still was believed to be the main deterrent to any intensive liquidation.

Stocks in the drifting division the greater part of the day were Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Glen Martin, American Smelting, Western Union, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, Chesapeake & Ohio and General Electric.

Mild resistance was shown by American Can, Union Carbide and Goodyear.

U-BOAT SINKS BRITISH SHIP

700 Feared Dead In Second Major Loss For Britain In Sea Warfare.

and 102 feet wide, the Royal Oak carried eight 15-inch guns, twelve six-inch, and fourteen of smaller caliber. She had two torpedo tubes.

Only the Nelson and Rodney, carrying nine 16-inch guns, are more heavily armed.

To sink the Royal Oak the submarine missiles had to penetrate armor plate varying in thickness from four to 13 inches, besides protective bulkheads.

Of striking appearance, the Royal Oak had a towering foremast and a tall crane. She also was equipped with a catapult for launching airplanes.

As if to minimize the impact of the news that one of the prides of the navy was sunk, the admiralty announced that the three U-boats sent to the bottom on Friday the 13th were of the large, ocean-going type.

Loss of the Courageous and Royal Oak mark the sole submarine successes against the British navy admitted by the admiralty, although the Germans have claimed several war craft were hit by raiding bombers.

The Royal Oak was recommissioned June 7, 1939, after another extensive refitting, which made her one of the most modern-equipped vessels in the fleet.

She participated in the battle of Jutland during the World war, and was under fire in the Spanish civil war.

Renew Claims That Ark Royal Was Sunk.

BERLIN —(U.P.)— German newspapers today renewed claims that the British airplane carrier Ark Royal—as well as the airplane carrier Courageous and the battleship Royal Oak—had been sunk by Nazi u-boats.

"Will Winston Churchill (first lord of the British admiralty) now admit the loss of a second aircraft carrier, the Ark Royal?" The official German news bureau asked in reporting the sinking of the Royal Oak.

"Perhaps Churchill will now answer the often repeated question: Where is the Ark Royal?

"When will he issue a list of survivors (of the Ark Royal) or were there survivors in this catastrophe?"

The German radio broadcast a British announcement of the losss of the Royal Oak.

Ruin Bridges to Avert Surprise Nazi Attack.

PARIS—(AP)—French military advices said today the destruction by the French of three big railway bridges over the Rhine river was to forestall any attempted German surprise offensive into French Alsace.

This action was taken after heavy German troop concentrations were reported along the frontier from Lauterbourg to Switzerland, heretofore a relatively quiet area.

North of the upper Rhine sector the Germans were reported in French advices to have massed enough tanks and heavy artillery between the Rhine and Moselle to launch a large scale offensive at any moment. On this sector no natural barrier such as the Rhine separates the two armies.

The Rhine-Moselle concentrations, coupled with a sudden lull in persistent activity of German patrols, kept French outposts on the alert as rain and fog settled over the lines after a day of clear, crisp weather.

A brief period of inactivity after several days of intense skirmishing was said by military experts to frequently presage a heavy assault.

ME AN' ZERO IS ORPHANS AN' I THOUGHT MAYBE YOU WAS AN ORPHAN, TOO — BESIDES, THIS GREEN STUFF SMELLS NICE AN' I'LL BETCHA IT WOULD TASTE GOOD, TOO —
'COURSE, THAT LITTLE MULE AIN'T FANCY-LOOKIN' LIKE THE MULES THEY HAVE IN THE CIRCUS — HE LOOKS KINDA SAD LIKE HE HAD LOTSA TROUBLE IN HIS LIFE —
I GUESS HE HEARD FOLKS CALL HIM THE "HANGMAN'S BURRO" AN' SAY ANYONE WHO EVEN LOOKS AT HIM WILL HAVE SOME KIND OF BAD LUCK — I FEEL AWFUL SORRY FOR HIM — WISHT I COULD HELP HIM —
BLESS YOUR TENDER HEART, HONEY — I SUPPOSE YOU ARE THE ONLY ONE ON EARTH WHO EVER HAD A KIND THOUGHT FOR THE POOR, FRIENDLESS CREATURE —
OH, ZERO LIKES HIM, TOO —
DARRELL McCLURE
EVERYONE SEZ THE BURRO IS UNLUCKY — IF YOU EVEN LOOK AT HIM YOU'LL HAVE BAD LUCK — BUT I LOOKED AT HIM AN' TALKED TO HIM AN' I GAVE HIM SOMETHIN' TO EAT AN' IT DIDN'T GIVE ME NO BAD LUCK!
I TELL YOU, CHIEF, THERE'S NOTHIN' TO WORRY ABOUT — MY WIFE'S SISTER IS A VERY SWEET, INNOCENT OLD LADY —
I DON'T LIKE IT — IF THE LAW-DOGS SUSPECT YOUR HOUSE IS —
DON'T YOU SEE? — IF ANY TIN-STAR WEARER COMES SNOOPING 'ROUND THE HOUSE AND TAKES ONE LOOK AT MY WIFE AN' HER SISTER — HE'LL NEVER THINK OF HOOKING 'EM UP WITH SMUGGLERS AND OUTLAWS!
WOMEN ARE POISON — I DON'T TRUST ANY OF 'EM!!
THAT GOES DOUBLE FOR ME — BUT DON'T FORGET MY WIFE'S SISTER HAS SOME MONEY WE COULD USE
DARRELL McCLURE
THAT'S RIGHT — DRINK IT ALL — THERE'S A SPRING THAT COMES RIGHT UP OUT OF THE GROUND IN THE PATIO AN' IT NEVER STOPS RUNNING — SO YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE THIRSTY ANY MORE
NO, MA'AM — I AIN'T HUNGRY — I'LL JUST FILL MY WATER-BAGS AND GET BACK TO TOWN — FOLKS SAY THAT THE "HANGMAN'S BURRO" HAS COME BACK
YOU MEAN YOU'RE AFRAID YOU MIGHT SEE THE BURRO?
I'M BRAVE AS THE NEXT ONE — BUT LAST YEAR MY UNCLE SAW THAT BURRO — AN' THE NEXT WEEK MY UNCLE GOT BIT BY A RATTLER —!!
HEAVENLY DAYS! THAT BOY'S PLUMB SCARED TO DEATH — I WONDER IF THE "HANGMAN'S BURRO" REALLY DOES BRING BAD LUCK? IT SEEMS STRANGE — BUT —??
GEE, MRS. BLACK — YOU DON'T REALLY AN' TRULY THINK JUST LOOKIN' AT THAT POOR OLD BURRO WOULD MAKE A SNAKE BITE YOU?? MAYBE THAT BOY WAS JUST TRYIN' TO FOOL US?
??
DARRELL McCLURE
THAT BOY WHO BROUGHT THE GROCERIES SEZ IF YOU JUST LOOK AT THE POOR OLD BURRO — A SNAKE WILL BITE YOU — OR YOU'LL BREAK A LEG — OR HAVE SOME AWFUL HARD LUCK —
BUT MRS. SPRUCE SEZ FOLKS WHO THINK WALKIN' UNDER LADDERS — SEEIN' BLACK CATS AN' STUFF LIKE THAT IS BAD LUCK ARE KINDA GOOFY
I'LL BERCHA ME AN' YOU LOOKED AT THAT BURRO A MILLION TIMES AN' OUR LEGS IS OKAY — I DON'T THINK THE POOR OLD BURRO WOULD HURT ANYBODY
DARRELL McCLURE
— BUT, OF COURSE, WE DON'T WANNA TAKE ANY CHANCES — WE'LL WALK CAREFUL, AN' WATCH OUT FOR SNAKES — AN' THEN I GUESS WE WON'T HAVE TO WORRY 'BOUT NO BAD LUCK
GEE, ZERO — IT'S KINDA FUNNY WHERE THAT OLD BURRO IS — I SAW HIM STANDIN' HERE — GOT A PAIL OF WATER TO GIVE HIM A DRINK — NOW HE'S GONE!!
I KIN SEE FOR MILES AN' MILES AN' ALL I KIN SEE IS SAND — NOT EVEN A JACK-RABBIT — AN' A BURRO COULDN'T FLY AWAY LIKE A BIRD —
LOOK WHAT I FOUND! SOME BURRO'S HAIR! MAYBE HE'S HIDIN' IN THE CACTUS — BUT YOU'D THINK HE'D BE SCARED OF ALL THE LONG, SHARP CACTUS STICKERS
THIS MUST BE A LITTLE PATHWAY — I KIN SEE THE MARKS OF THE BURRO'S FEET IN THE SAND —

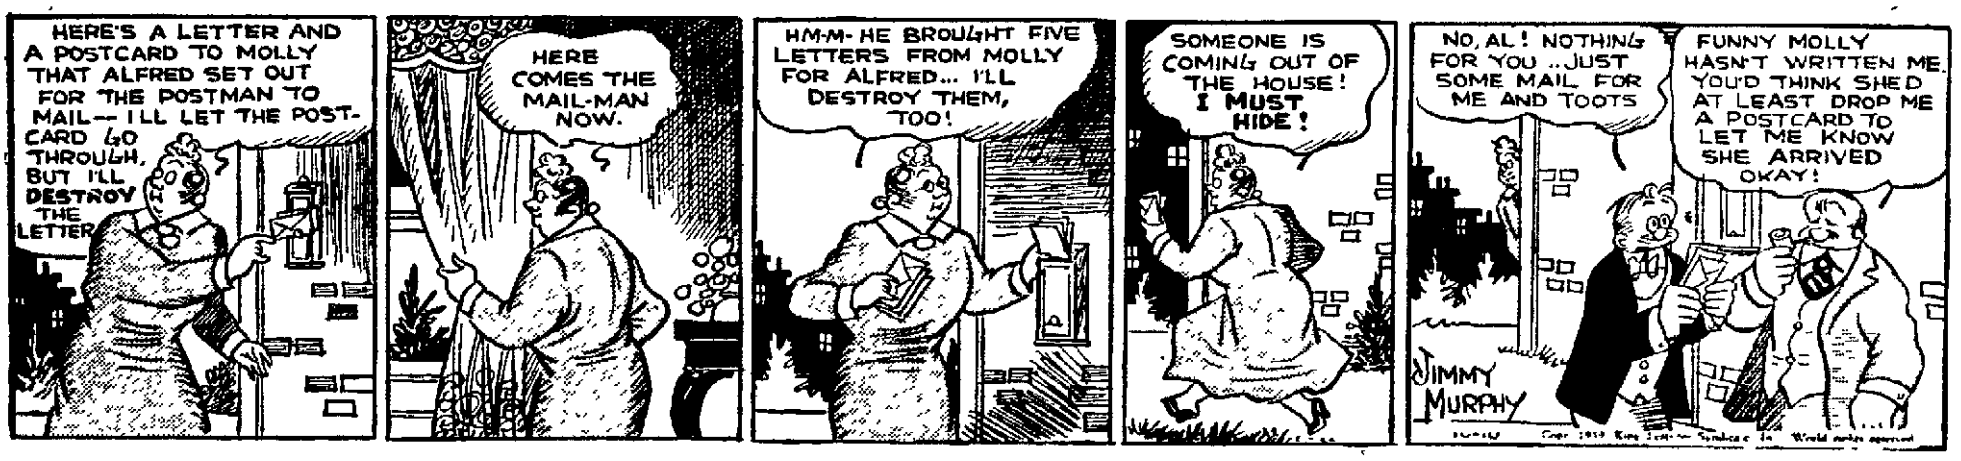
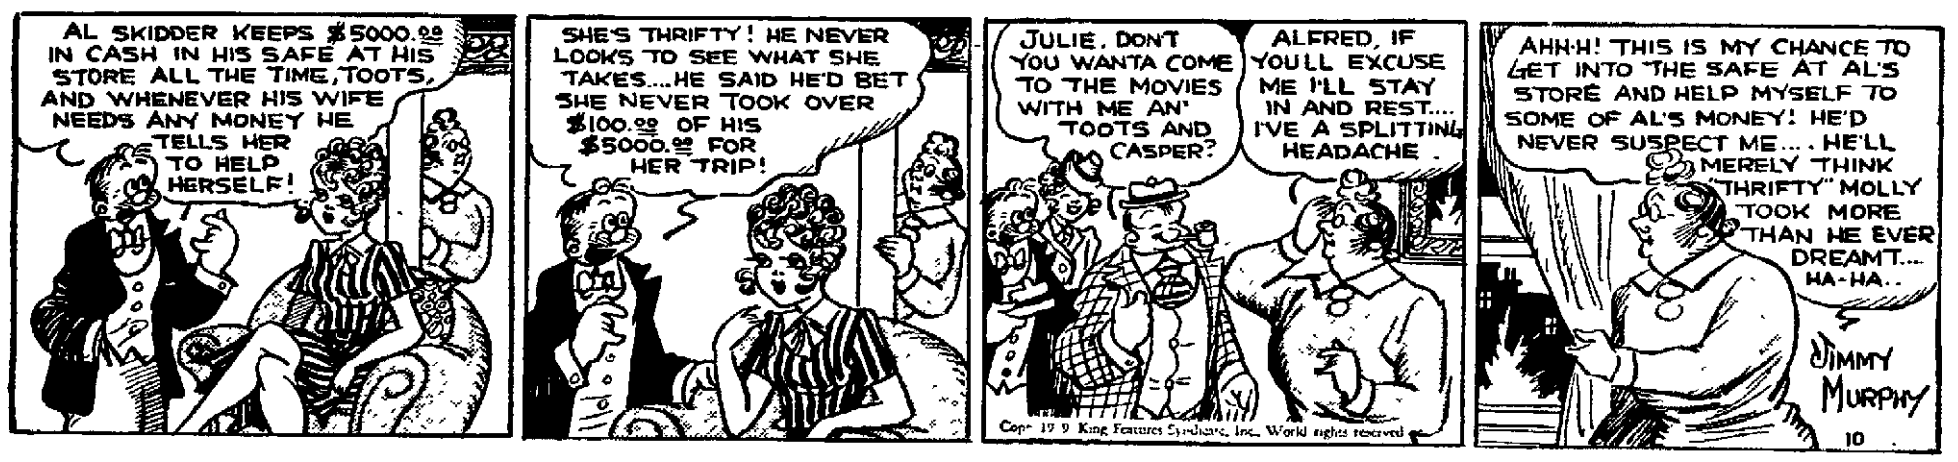
ALFRED, IF IT'S MOLLY YOU'RE WRITING TO, GIVE HER MY LOVE... SHE'S A SWEET GIRL!
SHE SURE IS, JULIE.
Copr. 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.
YES, SHE'S A NICE GIRL AND YOU'RE A FINE MAN! YOU TWO WE'RE MEANT FOR EACH OTHER... I'D FIGHT ANYBODY WHO EVER TRIED TO SEPARATE YOU.
CASPER, WE MISJUDGED JULIE! I THOUGHT SHE'D TRY TO CAUSE TROUBLE OR MAKE A PLAY FOR AL, BUT SHE'S ALL RIGHT!
JULIE SURE HAS CHANGED, TOOTS... SHE'S A GOOD SCOUT NOW.
THAT'S ALL JUST A SMOKE SCREEN TO HIDE MY REAL MOTIVE... ANYTHING IS FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR... MOLLY STOLE ALFRED FROM ME AND I'M GOING TO EVEN UP WITH HER BY STEALING HIM AWAY FROM HER.
JIMMY MURPHY



HERE'S A LETTER AND A POSTCARD TO MOLLY THAT ALFRED SET OUT FOR THE POSTMAN TO MAIL— I'LL LET THE POST-CARD GO THROUGH, BUT I'LL DESTROY THE LETTER
HERE COMES THE MAIL-MAN NOW.
HM-M- HE BROUGHT FIVE LETTERS FROM MOLLY FOR ALFRED... I'LL DESTROY THEM, TOO!
SOMEONE IS COMING OUT OF THE HOUSE! I MUST HIDE!
NO, AL! NOTHING FOR YOU .. JUST SOME MAIL FOR ME AND TOOTS
FUNNY MOLLY HASN'T WRITTEN ME. YOU'D THINK SHE'D AT LEAST DROP ME A POSTCARD TO LET ME KNOW SHE ARRIVED OKAY!
JIMMY MURPHY



AL SKIDDER KEEPS $5000.00 IN CASH IN HIS SAFE AT HIS STORE ALL THE TIME, TOOTS, AND WHENEVER HIS WIFE NEEDS ANY MONEY HE TELLS HER TO HELP HERSELF!
SHE'S THRIFTY! HE NEVER LOOKS TO SEE WHAT SHE TAKES... HE SAID HE'D BET SHE NEVER TOOK OVER $100.00 OF HIS $5000.00 FOR HER TRIP!

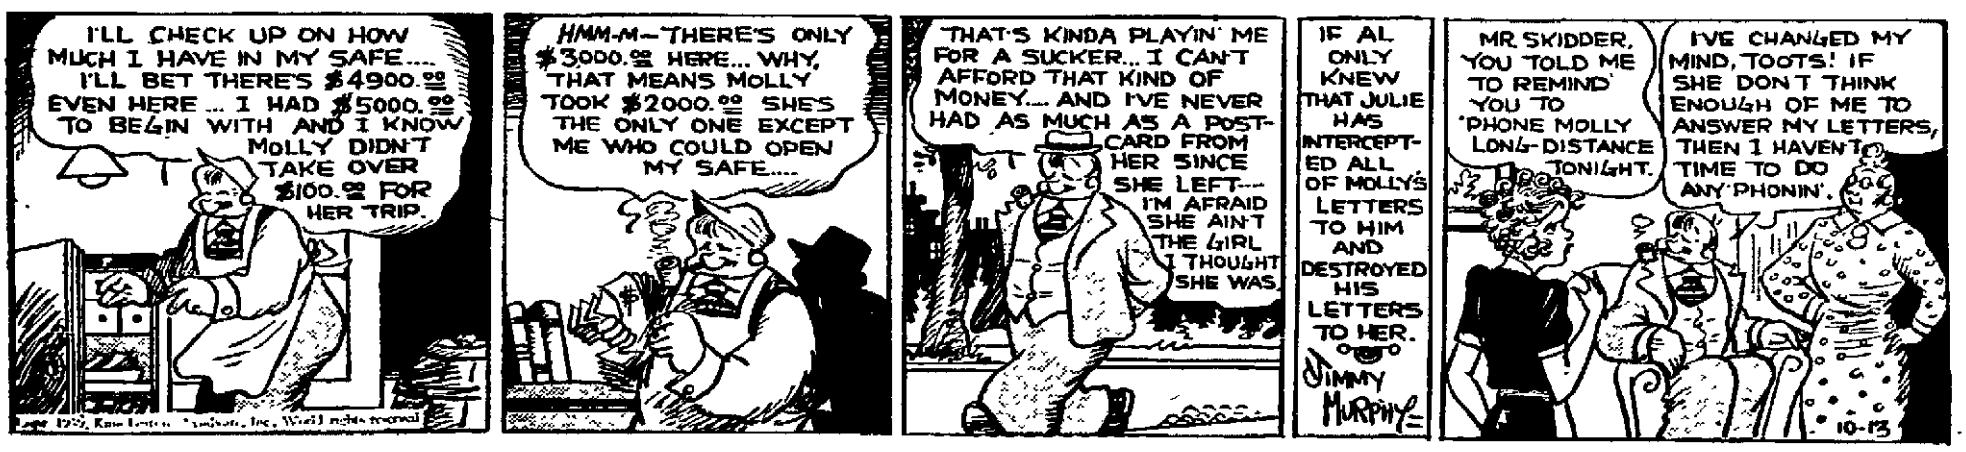
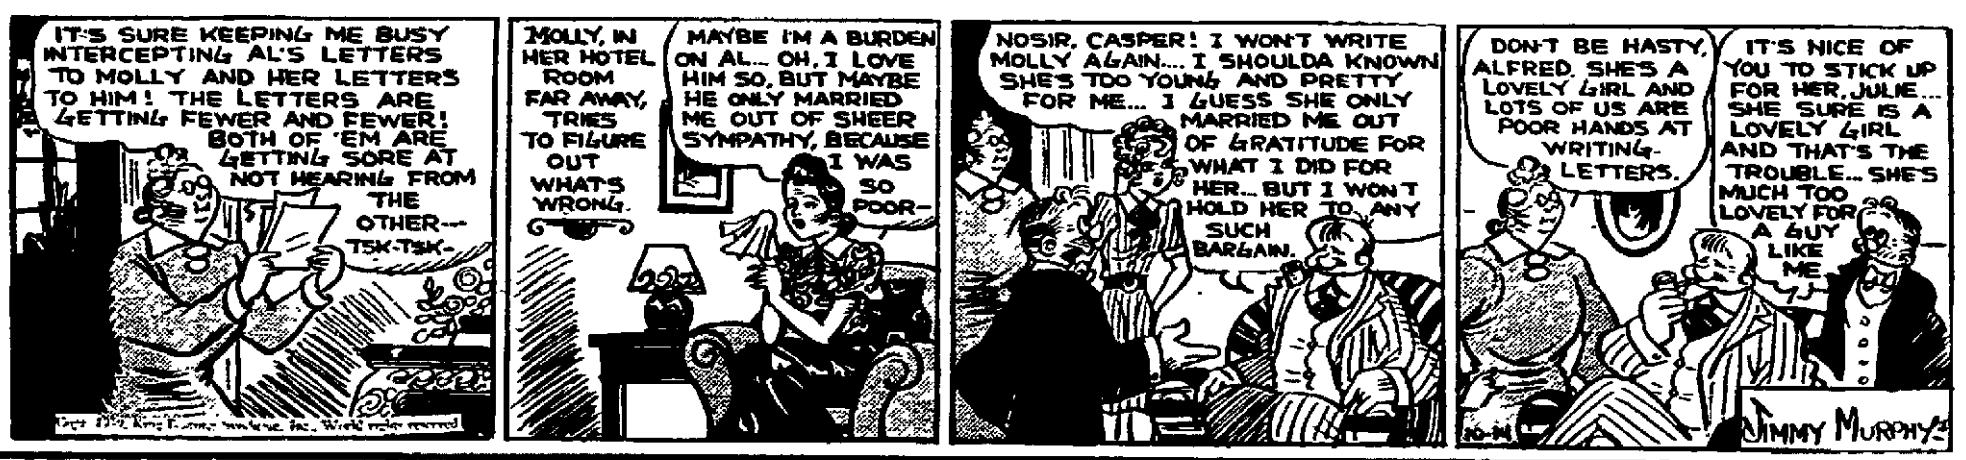
LITTLE DOES AL SKIDDER KNOW THAT THE REASON JULIE DIDN'T GO TO A MOVIE WITH HIM IS BECAUSE SHE'S USING THIS OPPORTUNITY TO GET TO THE SAFE AT HIS STORE....
JUST AS I THOUGHT... AL HAD THE COMBINATION OF HIS SAFE REVERSED FROM 6-17-14 TO 14-17-6..... SO HE NEVER LOOKED TO SEE HOW MUCH MONEY HIS WIFE TOOK FOR HER TRIP, EH? TSK-TSK--
Copr. 19-9, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.
THERE'S $4900.00 HERE! THAT MEANS SHE REALLY ONLY TOOK $100.00 FOR HER TRIP! WELL, HERE'S WHERE I PULL MYSELF OUT OF FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES...
--AND MOLLY CAN TAKE THE RAP! I'LL TAKE $1900.00 FOR MYSELF.... HE'LL THINK MOLLY TOOK IT, BUT HE LOVES HER TOO MUCH TO DISCUSS IT WITH HER...
IT'LL SHATTER HIS CONFIDENCE IN HER WHICH IS AS I WISH IT! HA-HA! NOW I'LL HURRY BACK BEFORE HE RETURNS FROM THE MOVIE.... HE MUSTN'T KNOW I WAS OUT OF THE HOUSE.
10-12
JIMMY MURPHY



I'LL CHECK UP ON HOW MUCH I HAVE IN MY SAFE.... I'LL BET THERE'S $4900.00 EVEN HERE ... I HAD $5000.00 TO BEGIN WITH AND I KNOW MOLLY DIDN'T TAKE OVER $100.00 FOR HER TRIP.
HMM-M—THERE'S ONLY $3000.00 HERE... WHY, THAT MEANS MOLLY TOOK $2000.00 SHE'S THE ONLY ONE EXCEPT ME WHO COULD OPEN MY SAFE....
"THAT'S KINDA PLAYIN' ME FOR A SUCKER... I CAN'T AFFORD THAT KIND OF MONEY.... AND I'VE NEVER HAD AS MUCH AS A POST-CARD FROM HER SINCE SHE LEFT--- I'M AFRAID SHE AIN'T THE GIRL I THOUGHT SHE WAS.
IF AL ONLY KNEW THAT JULIE HAS INTERCEPT-ED ALL OF MOLLY'S LETTERS TO HIM AND DESTROYED HIS LETTERS TO HER.
JIMMY MURPHY
MR. SKIDDER, YOU TOLD ME TO REMIND YOU TO 'PHONE MOLLY LONG-DISTANCE TONIGHT.
I'VE CHANGED MY MIND, TOOTS! IF SHE DON'T THINK ENOUGH OF ME TO ANSWER MY LETTERS, THEN I HAVEN'T TIME TO DO ANY 'PHONIN'.
10-13



IT'S SURE KEEPING ME BUSY INTERCEPTING AL'S LETTERS TO MOLLY AND HER LETTERS TO HIM! THE LETTERS ARE GETTING FEWER AND FEWER! BOTH OF 'EM ARE GETTING SORE AT NOT HEARING FROM THE OTHER--- TSK-TSK-
MOLLY, IN HER HOTEL ROOM FAR AWAY, TRIES TO FIGURE OUT WHAT'S WRONG.
MAYBE I'M A BURDEN ON AL... OH, I LOVE HIM SO, BUT MAYBE HE ONLY MARRIED ME OUT OF SHEER SYMPATHY, BECAUSE I WAS SO POOR-
NOSIR, CASPER! I WON'T WRITE MOLLY AGAIN.... I SHOULDA KNOWN SHE'S TOO YOUNG AND PRETTY FOR ME... I GUESS SHE ONLY MARRIED ME OUT OF GRATITUDE FOR WHAT I DID FOR HER... BUT I WON'T HOLD HER TO ANY SUCH BARGAIN.
DON'T BE HASTY, ALFRED. SHE'S A LOVELY GIRL AND LOTS OF US ARE POOR HANDS AT WRITING-LETTERS.
IT'S NICE OF YOU TO STICK UP FOR HER, JULIE... SHE SURE IS A LOVELY GIRL AND THAT'S THE TROUBLE... SHE'S MUCH TOO LOVELY FOR A GUY LIKE ME.

Report U. S. Investigates Spy Ring In Plane Plants

HOOVER LEADS FBI IN CHECK ON ESPIONAGE

West Coast Draftsman Held On Charge of Stealing Confidential Plans.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES — J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, today was reported personally directing a spy hunt among workers in airplane factories along the Pacific coast.

Widespread reports that a spy ring is operating in the vital industry, were climaxed yesterday with the arrest of Edward William McDonough who was accused of stealing highly confidential airplane plans from the Douglas factory at Santa Monica. McDonough blamed his predicament on a secret pride in the drawings he had made and that he kept in violation of orders to destroy them. He disclaimed any intention of selling the plans to foreign agents.

Held To Grand Jury.

As McDonough, 27, an aircraft mechanical engineer, was being held in the Los Angeles county jail under $10,000 bond, Chief Hoover suddenly hastened southward to San Diego, where the navy destroyer base is located, accompanied by six operatives.

Widely circulated was a report that a new spy ring has begun operations at the navy base and in San Diego airplane factories. The report was that important arrests would be made soon. The operatives, posing as salesmen, refused comment.

As for McDonough, the Los Angeles prisoner of the FBI, the plans he is accused of stealing were found in the bewildered young man's home.

McDonough also blamed enmity of his wealthy mother-in-law, Mrs. Lilly Wuerth, Beverly Hills matron, against whom he has brought action for $30,000 claiming alienation of his pretty young blond wife, the former Helen Wuerth.

McDonough said he had not contacted any foreign agent, claiming he "did not need money that bad."

The offense for which he has been arrested is punishable by a maximum penalty of 10 years imprisonment, $10,000 fine, or both.

Five Injured as 3 Accidents Occur In Same Vicinity

BUCYRUS — Three automobile accidents last night three miles east of town on Route 30 occurred within a few rods of each other, injuring five persons slightly.

Leonard Peterson of Fort Wayne, Ind., was bruised and his car damaged when he failed to see one-way traffic at the scene of road repairs. When he saw the oncoming machines he turned into the ditch and his automobile overturned.

At the same spot Myron Foust of Galion, who also told state highway patrolmen he couldn't see the one way traffic signs, collided with another car. His auto was slightly damaged.

Mrs. Clarence Assenheimer, Upper Sandusky, wife of the Upper Sandusky high school band leader, was driving several band members to the Upper Sandusky-Madison high school game at Mansfield last night when her machine collided headon with a truck driven by Albert Rashlin of Lima.

A car driven by Lawrence Bobson, also of Lima, then crashed into the rear of the truck. Everyone involved escaped injury except three persons in Bobson's car who were cut slightly.

The machine of Frederick Leitzy of Mansfield was demolished when Leitzy, blinded by the lights of an approaching car, struck a guard rail. He suffered cuts about the face.

Headless Body of Girl, 19, Found In Swamp

'MAD BUTCHER' HUNTED; 3 BOYS DISCOVER BODY

Police at New Castle Claim Head Was Chopped Off, Body Placed on Funeral Pyre.

BULLETIN

NEW CASTLE, Pa. — An autopsy disclosed today the body of a mutilated victim found in an eerie "murder swamp" near here was that of a man and not a woman as first believed.

(By Associated Press)

NEW CASTLE, Pa.—Finding of the headless and nude body of a young girl in a dreary "murder swamp" developed the possibility today that Cleveland's "mad butcher" had claimed another victim.

Coroner Charles Byers said the girl had been slain probably two weeks ago then partially burned in an attempt to conceal her identity. A single stocking found nearby offered investigators their only clue.

The head, severed cleanly with either a sharp knife or ax, was not located in a hurried search of the desolate marshlands along the Pennsylvania-Ohio state line. A detail of state police was asked to aid in the hunt.

The scene was the setting of six similar slayings of men and women, one of them decapitated, in the past decade. All of those crimes remain unsolved.

The swamp is 100 miles from Cleveland where a cruel slayer's headless victims have turned up in dumps for six years. Cleveland authorities were summoned on the theory the girl's death might be linked with the torso murders.

Three boys hunting walnuts yesterday stumbled upon the gruesome form on dry ground secreted by weeds six feet tall. They ran breathless a mile and a half to notify police.

The victim—18 or 19 years old, weighing about 120 pounds and approximately five feet, six inches tall—lay chest down over the cold ashes of a fire that had been her funeral pyre.

There was a deep ax-like gash in the groin. Fire had burned the flesh near the top of the spinal column. In the partly clenched hands were bits of charred paper, apparently fired to destroy fingerprints.

"The murderers probably walked her in there, killed her, sawed her head off and burned her," declared County Detective Paul Welsh who is considering a "racketeer murder" theory in addition to a possible connection with the Cleveland killings.

"They built a fire, undressed and placed the body, front down, on it," said Welsh. "Then they put paper on her back, poured gasoline over it all and burned it. The girl had a beautiful body, very symmetric."

Up and Down THE STREET

Although unable to hunt deer because of curtailed transportation facilities to the deer country, Clifford Sherrard did not return from his Canadian hunting trip empty handed. He brought down a prize bear which weighed 200 pounds, and his friends are eating bear steak instead of venison this year. Deer were plentiful in the sector where he was hunting, but the season was closed on the animal.

The young peanut "butcher" at the Madison High-Upper Sandusky game last night, sort of streamlined that ancient and honorable business. The traditional hawker has always carried his wares with him, tempting customers with the sight and odor of hot peanuts. But not this modern "butcher." He carried no wares with him but went among the crowd taking orders and then delivering them later. It may have made more steps, but it certainly looked dignified.

The speed that Jerry King, operator of the Smokehouse, possessed in his basketball playing days at Senior high school failed him last night, and as a result he lost $250 by less than a minute. King's name was called as winner of the bank night award at the Madison theater and a friend called him at his place of business a block away and notified him of his good fortune. Minus hat and coat, he made a dash for the theater, but reached the stage shortly after the three-minute-period given a person to claim the award had elapsed.

The Ohio State-Northwestern football game in Columbus today has been nothing but a headache to Herbert Slough, Mansfield insurance man. His trouble started when he lost eight $4 tickets he had ordered for himself and some friends. He finally got duplicate tickets from Ohio State, but no assurance that someone hadn't found the originals and might try to use them. "It's going to be interesting to see 16 people trying to occupy eight seats," he commented.

Five of the elementary schools and Senior high school showed increases, four elementary schools had fewer pupils enrolled and enrollment at another was the same as in 1938.

No comparisons were available for the junior high schools since construction of two new buildings shifted pupils to other buildings.

The Western Avenue, Hedges, Brinkerhoff and Bushnell schools showed declines. The number of pupils in the special schools for handicapped children dropped to 106 from 117.

With a 98.5 per cent attendance the Prospect school headed the list during the first month of school, Miller said. Hedges elementary was second with 98.4 per cent, and Western Avenue and Carpenter schools third with 98 per cent.

A total of 4,405 pupils were neither absent nor tardy in September. There were 360 cases of tardiness and 22 of truancy. Senior high school had 108 cases of tardiness, far more than any other school. John Simpson junior high school led the list in truancy with eight cases.

Not That It Matters

The Old Drum-Beater Warns Legionnaires of "Fool Sacrifice"

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THAT sardonic old drum-beater, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, never pounded more strenuously on any subject than he has on keeping out of war. And his beating of the drum takes on importance when it is remembered that the general was the originator of the selective draft service during the World war and was in charge of the entire draft set-up.

And because this column believes that NOW is the time to beat the drum for peace and not after we become involved in a war, it takes space out today to give you some of the highlights of a recent speech that Johnson made to the Legionnaires of the nation. (We all can speak our pieces now but if America becomes involved, we'll have to shut up—and this column will start printing recipes for biscuits.)

PERHAPS no one but Johnson could call the Legionnaires "suckers who were bamboozled into the war," and get away with it. "When the war broke out in 1914," he said, "we were the world's prize fat boy with the bag of candy among a horde of hungry urchins. When the Allies were busted we simply opened our treasury; we sent them 'men in their undershirts'—boys untrained and unready—until we had more men in France than the English ever had.

"And what did it cost us?" he asked. "In dollars, 40 billion. Skip it. Such box car figures reach so far toward the infinite that we can't understand them. We paid a good half of the Allied war cost. Yet even that was chicken feed compared with the real cost—ten years of terrible depression, 200 billion dollars of lost income and production. And debts and taxes that take 20 per cent of all that this generation and its children will make. That's what we paid for our last blunder and we're still paying."

"BUT," he pointed out, "we don't need to make a second fool's sacrifice. We can keep out of it. The argument is that with the British navy and the French army defeated, we will be the next victim. If the belligerents are fools enough to fight it out to the very finish, both will be so exhausted that neither would dare to take us on for a generation."

And I particularly liked his assertion that there is no difference between the situation then and now—except that it's Hitler instead of the Kaiser. "And the only difference between Hitler and the Kaiser," he opined, "is the droop of the drawers and the cut of the mustache."

DESPITE Charlie West's statement in Mansfield this week that he is "off the public payroll and out of the public eye," a lot of friends of the erstwhile under secretary of the Interior, and former congressman from this district, are betting that it is a temporary and not a permanent condition.

Because "Uncle Charlie" is too young and too fascinated with the Washington picture and with politics to forsake them permanently. They do say that he would be vastly comfortable to fold his long frame into a senatorial seat, even without bedroom slippers. And strictly betwen us boys, Charlie had such a swell time while he was in the House that he might even consider that again—in case Honest Vic Donahey decides to run for the senate again next year.

And if we were venturing a guess as to why he made a clean break with the Washington set-up a year ago, it would be that he was smart enough to know that association with the Cohen-Corcoran entente had labeled him one of those funny Brain Trusters, and the Masses and Classes alike just won't take them seriously. All of which made it bad for a lad with aspirations.

But Uncle Charlie will be back on the ballot some of these days. Wait and see.

WHEN you look at the fall hats women are wearing this season, do you have the feeling that you've seen something like them somewhere, someplace?

Stop and think . . . Could it be those funny lids that men wear when coming home from a drunken fishing trip?

WAR ANNOYANCES: Why do writers insist on calling it "another World war?" There are still a number of countries not involved in it . . . And why will Europeans sneer that they have to do the fighting while America sits back and makes the profit? After all, there isn't any monopoly on peace. Any damn fool can get into a fight, but it takes brains and courage to stay out of one.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Peg Gives the British Living Here a Once Over and Tells What He Thinks

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—How odd it is, to be sure, that the British, meaning, actually, the English, who have sent this country fewer immigrants than Andorra since the United States put on long pants and began to carry matches and shave, nevertheless, have more influence among us than any of those foreign elements who came here in bewildered droves to engage in strong-back toil, but still, even to the third generation, are snootily regarded as being at least a little bit foreign.

I have no statistics on the English immigration, and it is only by a firm effort of the will that I refrain from making up some, as those book writers and orators do who startled the public with dogmatic declarations that 60 families control 98 per cent of the wealth. However, in the course of some rather extensive getting around, I have never come upon an English colony anywhere in the United States, and individual Englishmen, naturalized or otherwise, are comparatively rare.

They have had other plans. Their surplus sons of the dude and demi-dude classes, after the elder ones had been bedded down in the army and navy, the civil service and the ministry, went out in Injer, to Canada, Australia and Africa. The low-born followed their betters to the colonies, where their efforts counted for the empire, and a bloke didn't have to explain why "bloody" is such a bloody-awful word and why they spell "connection" with an "x."

Few of them came here, most of those few were not at all pleased, and they have never been conspicuous in the railroad camps or harvest fields.

Scandinavians and Germans went straight to the land in great numbers, the Poles went to Chicago and Toledo and the Italians huddled wherever there was hard work to be done and did it. We got some miners from England, but more from Wales, and years ago quite a few English weavers came over, but many went back.

Notwithstanding the comparative rarity of Englishmen among us, however, there persists in the land a strange, inscrutable feeling of not exactly aloofness, but something like it, toward persons whose names end in vowels of "itch." This feeling is less noticeable toward persons with Scandinavian or German names, but has not been wholly conquered, and there is a vague superstition in the hearts of Americans of British descent that they are big casino, even though they actively dislike England.

I am not going to get mired in an analysis of all this, but I think the feeling is due in part to the humbug of titles and rank in England, whereby, against our sense, we are taken in by the transformation of an ordinary Englishman into a lord in recognition of some routine service in trade or public office, or, more likely, in reward for a cash contribution to a political campaign fund.

Had we the same system, Jim Farley, Paul McNutt, Chip Robert, Jim Moffatt and Mrs. Perkins would have received titles long ago, and Mr. Farley, entirely forsaking the name of his fathers, would now be known as Lord Rockland.

The ordinary, untitled, pip-pip and toodle-oo Englishman in our midst also is undeniably someone, a little more special than an American of equal intelligence and learning, or a German, Italian or Spaniard. He is an Englishman, you understand. At home, an Englishman is just another Englishman.

The Americans of other breeds sometimes form clubs, not with the treacherous motives of the anti-American Bund, but to promote good Americanism among their numbers and, incidentally, ballyhoo traits of their stock which they deem admirable.

SUNDAY TOPIC

'Doctrine of Atonement' Will Be Scientist Lesson-Sermon.

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Church of Christ, Scientist, Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous" (1 John 2:1).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And God spake all these words, saying, . . . I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. . . . Thou shalt have no other gods before me" (Exodus 20:1-3).

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1939.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and remember that stop signs are intended for YOUR protection.

There's also an advantage in living in a country where routine tasks can be forgotten while the football game is on.

This is the short season when folks who were away for the summer can renew acquaintance with friends who are soon to leave for Florida to spend the winter.

Mansfield and Its Products

WHEN Mansfield's Chamber of Commerce this week announced a new membership peak of 652 it also revealed one of the vital reasons for this city's almost unexampled progress in recent years.

Also this week came announcement of a substantial upswing in local industrial employment, upon which Mansfield is largely dependent for individual and community well-being.

From a small organization, faithfully striving to overcome obstacles and to perform essential community service, the Chamber of Commerce has grown to representative proportions, with more adequate financing and greatly enlarged opportunities.

The wisdom of Mansfield's earlier policies of preferring steady, sound growth, rather than mere population gains, has been plainly evidenced during the past decade of depression.

Diversification of industries has also proved beneficial as a stabilizing influence, as contrasted with cities which leaned heavily toward some particular product and became constantly harassed by labor troubles and excessive unemployment as a result.

With inadequate sewer lines and water distribution facilities, Mansfield's further growth to the extent of possibilities appears quite unlikely and this is among the problems to be solved within the next few years.

Traveling outside of Mansfield, and talking with many people in other cities, it is interesting and gratifying to note the extent of favorable publicity which the home town has attained in a variety of ways—its nationally known electrical products, gas ranges, automobile tires, and other manufactured articles—also its recent world premiere of "The Rains Came," and the Major Bowes salute.

Wherever you go, almost everyone you meet is acquainted with somebody in Mansfield, or knows something about this city. "Mansfield, Ohio," remarked one resident of a distant city, "that's the only place I remember passing through on our trip back from the east. It's such a beautiful city, with so many fine trees and attractive homes. We stayed there over night because we were so favorably impressed."

Fortunately they were motoring through and their impression was not marred by a glimpse of Mansfield's railroad stations.

Civilian War Pensions

IT IS REALIZED at last that modern warfare comes to the people at home as it does to the armies in the field. Bombing planes can make a battlefront of any city or countryside. Men, women and children at their daily tasks may be slain like soldiers.

The British government now gives practical recognition to this fact. There are to be pensions for the "civilians on the firing line." There is to be compensation not only for "the combatant who remains at home" but for the wife or child suffering war injury in the domestic line of duty. The rates are in line with those for soldiers.

"In case of a man's death," explains the Manchester Guardian, "pension and children's allowances will be paid to the widow and, where circumstances justify it, to other dependents. Injury allowances will be paid weekly. The amounts will be fixed, regardless of means, according to the size of the family. A man with a wife and two children treated in hospital will receive 28 shillings and six-pence a week. Pensions will vary with the degree of disablement, with a maximum of 32 shillings and six-pence for a single man and 22 shillings and six-pence for a single woman. The widow's pension in such cases is similar to pensions paid soldiers' widows."

Here is a precedent which may be followed hereafter in all civilized countries.

Making Ready for Election.

SO QUIETLY that its approach has been almost unnoted by many, election day has crept up to within a month, and it is now high time for candidates, friends of candidates, and other politically minded citizens to start concentrating on the municipal campaign, which has only three weeks to go.

Both parties announce that "drives are to be launched" next week, which at least has an impressive sound and evidences interest—although possibly not as much real concern as should be felt in performing the important task of choosing city officials.

In addition to electing officials, several issues are to be voted upon at the November election and voters will find it an advantage to give some time, within the next three weeks, to becoming informed as to candidates and proposals to amend the state constitution.

Richland County Lags

TRAVELING hundreds of miles west on Route 30 (the Lincoln highway), it is rather humiliating to observe the extent to which Richland county has lagged behind in the matter of removing the hazard of railroad grade crossings.

This is made especially impressive in neighboring Bucyrus, where three new underpasses have removed the danger of crossing the numerous railroad tracks in entering that city from the east.

Present well-advanced plans for elimination of the B. & O. and Erie grade crossings on the West Fourth street road offer probably the least expensive opportunity that Richland county will ever have to carry through this improvement.

It is a chance that should not be muffed by responsible officials.

There may be no such thing as a "sure winner" but Joe Louis and the New York Yankees come reasonably close to the mark.

Another sign that the world isn't coming to an end—people are building and buying homes again.

War, too, grows polite. Each side waits for the other to start it.

That isn't war over there; it's a poker game.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—After all these years, with hundreds of plays coming and going, I still think the funniest scene on Broadway concerns the destruction of an automobile in Tobacco Road. It isn't a scene, really; the final obliteration of this automobile requires several scenes. It is explained in a few fragments of dialog.

Now this dialog is no good on paper. The background of the play is so essential to it that quotations would be meaningless. There is a strange quality of abstractness all through this play, particularly in the dialog of Jeeter Lester. He is never concerned with actual events themselves. If his grandmother, who is nearly a hundred, gets lost in the "sedge brush," it goes unnoticed for days. Then he reflects, "I better look for her, one of these days."

There is one scene in which his wife admits to an earlier infatuation with a traveling salesman. The salesman arrived on Tobacco Road when Jeeter was off in Macon. "That was the time you went off to buy that brown mule," his wife tells him. Instead of being horrified at this frank admission, Jeeter looks at her for a second and then slaps his sides. "I remember that mule," he says, "best durn mule I ever had."

The same quality of abstraction, which in my opinion is the only justification for the play, reaches a high note when the half-witted son, who marries a woman preacher, systematically wrecks a new automobile which his wife's first husband insurance has provided. Every time he takes the car out he tears off a fender, or caves in the hood.

They limp into the yard finally and the half-wit son yells to Jeeter, "Had another wreck, shore did, but couldn't hep it. Wawn't my fault. Wasn't nuthing in that road a tall. Then I look around for a little, and the moment I turned my eyes offen the road, nigger jumps out."

"Didja kill him?" Jeeter asks.

"Well, I looked back and he wasn't moving."

Jeeter thinks that over for a moment, shakes his head. "'Sfunny thing," he says, "but niggers'll jump in front of cars 'spite anything a man can do—you just CAIN'T keep 'em from doin' it."

I do not approve of the degeneration of the word Negro to nigger, but in a play this is permissible, when used by degenerate whites. And degenerates they certainly are, in Tobacco Road. I imagine you could bankrupt the theater and not find a lower, sorrier, rattier, dirtier group of characters than the Lester household. They are inbred and they do not take baths. They change clothes only when their own apparel becomes so rotten it falls off their bodies.

Tobacco Road is now along in its sixth year. When it was opened the critics were frankly puzzled. It was a new piece of pie to them. On the whole, they agreed that it wouldn't do, that it could not last on Broadway. But it lasted a year, and five years, and now, like a war on a flood, nobody knows what the future of the Jeeter Lesters will be.

INDIAN SUMMER

Embargo Repeal Foreshadowed

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—A majority of something like five to two is practically assured for the Administration side when the neutrality bill finally comes to a vote. This is clearly foreshadowed by the 65 to 26 vote on the motion to send the bill back to committee. The real purpose of this motion, was to sidetrack indefinitely the only part of the whole bill in which President Roosevelt—and for that matter most of the senators on that side—are interested. This is the repeal of the arms embargo.

It is well known that the president would have liked nothing better than straight-out repeal of the arms embargo, with nothing new substituted. He pointed out to congress in his address, as a matter of fact, that most of the other objectives contemplated by those hoping to avoid embroilment could be accomplished by administration, and without additional authorization from the lawmakers.

Further—one of the obstacles at present is the difficulty of preventing the wholesale prohibition tendency of the bill to throttle American shipping absolutely. It is difficult to plan a scheme which will prevent all risks of entanglements and yet not drive the budding American merchant marine off the seas.

HAD the motion to send the bill back to committee succeeded, it is likely that the isolationists might have had just as much trouble pushing through the sort of neutrality bill they would like against the filibuster of the other side as the administration is now having pushing the arms embargo repeal. Besides, it is virtually certain, if the sort of bill the isolationists would like should have passed—that is of course without including the arms embargo repeal — that the president would have vetoed it.

But the interesting point now is that 65 to 26 vote. Leaders of the anti-embargo repeal group insist that this vote was not a good barometer. They still insist they will win in the end. There is no good political logic in this whatever.

The simple fact is that a senator who intended to vote against repeal of the embargo on "arms, ammunition and implements of war" would naturally have voted for that motion to send the bill back to committee. An examination of the roll call shows that all the senators definitely committed against repeal did so vote, and that all the senators definitely committed the other way voted against sending the bill to committee.

It's a clear case of politics. A senator voting to send the bill back to committee is now stamped as being anti-repeal. If he votes the other way later on, his record will confuse his constituents. Such confusions are nearly always bad in politics.

The same is true, of course, with respect to senators who voted against sending the bill back to committee.

ONE of the best illustrations of what happens politically is that of James W. Wadsworth, then a senator from New York and now a member of the house. Wadsworth had been wringing wet all through the fight which led up to the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment. But after the adoption of that amendment he voted for the Volstead act, explaining at the time that if the country had adopted this foolish amendment of course it would have to have some law to enforce it.

But when Wadsworth came up for re-election, in 1926, one of the very weak spots in his armor was that while all the drys were against him anyhow, many of the wets distrusted him because of the fact that he had voted for the Volstead Act! And he was beaten by a small majority.

They Thought You Were Worth While.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

AWFUL lot of the blues lately, isn't there? Times when you'd swap your whole future for a plugged nickel. Get that way yourself? Of course you do. Who doesn't?

Maybe it's because we're all so bewildered. Don't know where we're going or how we'll get there. And uncertainty is Plain Poison for most folks. Whatever the cause—every now and then we all get plenty sunk. Hating everybody 'n' everything. Wondering if it's all worth while and what the heck's the use of going on.

It's no use—times like that—handing yourself any Pollyanna hokum. Telling yourself there's a silver lining to every cloud. Assuring yourself that You'll Show 'Em Some Day If You Ever Get a Chance. You know derned well you won't show 'em.

You're a tramp and nobody's hep to it better than you, yourself. A flat tire. A wash out. Not worth the powder to blow you up—

So on and on—with your stock sinking lower and you hating yourself worse every minute. And your family probably agreeing with you.

Pretty muggy? Yes—and how! For if you can't have faith in yourself, there isn't much left, is there? If you can't believe that you, yourself, are worth while—or produce any proofs that you are—there isn't much inducement to keep on fighting. And you're the one who knows it, aren't you, stranger? Which is why I'm writing this. And maybe what I'm about to tell will help a heap.

It happened to me the other day when I was sunk. And, boy when I'm sunk, I'M SUNK! So there I was, wallowing around with no more ambition than a last week's waffle. Just telling myself what a bum I am. And suddenly—as if someone had spoken out of the big black clouds, I heard—

"THEY THOUGHT YOU WERE WORTH WHILE!"

They—? What'd it mean? Nobody, as far as I knew, were placing very heavy bets on Elsie. Nobody, if they were in their senses, was apt to go bond on the old gal's stock. And yet there was that voice crying—

"THEY THOUGHT YOU WERE WORTH WHILE!"

And suddenly I saw them standing up tall and straight and shining—against the dust of time—those brave, believing spirits who had thought that I—and you—and all of us—were worth while. Thought it so deeply, firmly, furiously, that they were willing to stake all they had on that belief. Willing to stake even life. And DID!

OLD SOCRATES. Never a man knew other men better than he—all their weakness and cussedness, all their rottenness and unreliability. And yet—he was willing to gamble all he had on that same human nature. Willing to throw away power and position and vast popularity rather than turn his back on the Common Man. And DID!

Old Socrates, drinking hemlock—laughing as he felt the death chill creeping, creeping—but the faith in his fighting eyes never chilling, not even at the end—HE THOUGHT WE WERE WORTH WHILE.

And that young carpenter from Nazareth—Who might, so easily, have held His people's scepter in His hand, yet chose instead to die like any common thief — HE THOUGHT WE WERE WORTH WHILE.

And last, those two who fed and warmed our baby helplessness—those two poor, simple, kindly human souls who loved us better than they loved their own lives—Mother and Father—They, TOO, THOUGHT WE WERE WORTH WHILE.

THEY—ALL OF THEM—THEY THOUGHT WE WERE WORTH WHILE. THOUGHT THERE WAS SOMETHING IN US FINE AND BRAVE AND TRUE. AND BACKED THAT FAITH WITH ALL THEY HAD OR WERE. AND YET WE WHINE AND QUIT BECAUSE THE WAY IS HARD! AND SELL, FOR A PLUGGED NICKEL, WHAT THEY DIED TO SAVE!

Timely Editorial

The Covered Bridge Again.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently revived the old question of why covered bridges were covered. Lately a WPA project which made some inquiries in Ohio—where no less than 609 old-time covered bridges still stand—brought to light eight theories, all about as inadequate as those put forward during previous controversies.

It seems high time the argument were settled—especially as the answer, which happens to be in our possession, is entirely simple. It was given us by an old codger of a chemist and wood products research man whose granddaddy, back east, was an engineer and builder of covered bridges—what you might call a tip from the feedbox.

Here's the explanation: Covered bridges were covered to keep the rain off. Yes, and the snow and the hot summer sunshine, too; not to keep these punishing agents away from the men and animals using the bridge—though this has something to be said in its favor—but rather, to keep them from exercising their deleterious effects upon the basic substructure of the bridge itself, its huge timber beams, arches and trusses.—Chicago Daily News.

Summary of Week's Happenings

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THEODORE ROOSEVELT won a Nobel prize for initiating the negotiations that ended the Russo-Japanese war in 1905. For his fifth cousin, the man in the White House now, some saw this week an even bigger opportunity to ride into history as a champion of peace.

Adolf Hitler's peace-or-war speech last week-end had been followed by broad hints in Nazi circles that the Fuehrer would welcome a mediation proposal from the head of any great neutral nation, particularly the U. S.

And among senatorial mentors of American foreign policy, both friends and foes of the administration's neutrality program, support was voiced for some move by Mr. Roosevelt to bring Europe's warring powers to terms.

Logical Time?

"I would very much like to see the chief executive do that job," said North Dakota's isolationist Senator Gerald P. Nye, author of the present arms embargo. "I think now is the logical time to move."

But the president refused to stick his neck out, pending some official suggestion from Berlin, and Washington wiseacres thought it unlikely he would offer his services for mediation without advance assurances of acceptance from London and Paris.

The fruit of his previous appeals to Germany, newsmen recalled, had been pretty puny. To only one of five in the last year—his Sept. 1 request that potential belligerents promise not to bomb unfortified towns—had Hitler replied favorably.

Last April, the fuehrer answered FDR's suggestion for a 10-year peace pledge with a speeceh telling America to mind her own business. And the president's proposal in August that Germany and Poland compromise their differences was described by Nazis as having been "sent to the wrong address."

Meanwhile, in congress, the debate on neutrality rolled on.

At Home

How's Business?

America's wealth dropped nearly 20% from 1930 to 1934, the National Industrial Conference board reported last week-end, but by 1937 had climbed above 90% of the 1929 peak—and has been pushing up steadily since. Gains since the 1938-39 slump bumped bottom were reflected in the rise of AP's industrial index from 81.8% of 1929-30 in mid-May to 106.3% this week.

As to the war boom: Commodity prices had eased somewhat since the buying wave struck early last month; and a softness in "war baby" stocks—such as steels and chemicals—showed Wall street keeping its fingers crossed about foreign orders pending the outcome of Europe's "peace threat" and Washington's neutrality debate.

Most economists polled by AP this week considered both war and domestic business conditions responsible for the current upturn, with war relatively the more important factor. Said Stuart Chase: "The boomlet will collapse with early peace. With a cash-and-carry law enacted, a massive upturn is unlikely. Even with embargo repeal, munitions sales are likely to be moderate. The allies will give preference to their own empires' raw materials."

Army Maneuvers.

For its size, the U. S. has one of the world's smallest armies: 227,000 regulars (including 17,000 being recruited "as rapidly as possible" under the president's recent "national emergency" orders), plus about that many more in the National Guard, plus some 100,000 reserve officers.

But army braintrusters say their organization, because of the way it's set up, actually is mightier than it looks on paper. And soon, if congress agrees, the war department expects to boost the standing force to its full peacetime limit: 280,000.

Iroquois Incident.

Carrying 584 homing Americans and a crew of 275, the 6,209-ton U. S. liner Iroquois put out from Cobh, Ireland, on Tuesday last week. Two days later, the White House made public a startling tip from Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, head of the German navy, that the vessel was "to be sunk when it nears our American east coast . . . through a repetition of circumstances which marked the loss of the Athenia."

President Roosevelt immediately dispatched a coast guard cutter and four naval destroyers to meet the Iroquois in mid-Atlantic and escort her to port this week.

Abroad

Red Star Over Baltic.

Along the jagged eastern coast of the Baltic sea, on land previously ruled by Russia's czars, the World war settlements created four independent republics:

Finland, farthest north, is almost as big as Montana and has a few more people than Chicago. Her illiteracy rate (.1%) is perhaps the world's lowest, and cooperatives handle 80% of her wholesale trade. Residents of Helsinki, her capital, play golf by the midnight summer sun.

Americans know Finland best because she pays her war debts, and has produced foot-racer Paavo Nurmi and composer Jan Sibelius.

Estonia, south across the Gulf of Finland, is about the size of Vermont and New Hampshire combined and has a population a little smaller than that of Los Angeles. Chief products: butter, foodstuffs, timber. Chief trade asset: an ice-free port at Tallinn, her capital.

Latvia, bordering Estonia on the south, compares with West Virginia in area, with Philadelphia in population. She's short on transportation facilities and natural resources; has an American-educated dictator, Riga, the capital, is the largest of her three ice-free ports.

Lithuania, south of Latvia and north of Russia's half of Poland and Germany's East Prussia, is slightly larger than Maryland plus Massachusetts and has more people than any U. S. city except New York and Chicago. Three-fourths of them are farmers, and her chief products are grain, meat and butter.

Kremlin Conferences.

Germany grabbed Memel from Lithuania last spring, then bolstered Nazi influence thereabouts by concluding non-aggression pacts also with Latvia and Estonia. But Moscow, while still honey-mooning with Berlin, now is swiftly transforming the Baltic east coast into a Soviet economic and military preserve.

Conflicting Claims.

Japan's ambassador to China, on landing recently at San Francisco, was asked to comment on the U. S. neutrality law. "Pardon me," he replied, "I try to keep my lip buttoned up."

His countrymen first kept their lips buttoned up, too, about the Nipponese retreat from China's Changsha. But later they answered Chinese victory claims by saying they never intended to capture the city. Their objective—to forestall a counter-offensive — had been "brilliantly" achieved, they asserted, by the killing of nearly 30,000 enemy troops. Chinese put Japanese losses at 30,000 men and huge quantities of arms.

People

New Senator.

In last year's primary, Kentucky's rambunctious Gov. Albert Benjamin (Happy) Chandler failed, under presidential frowns, to grab Alben Barkley's seat in the U. S. senate. This week, at 41, he offered Barkley a symbolic "umbrella of appeasement"; commissioned a final batch of 60 Kentucky colonels; resigned as governor; and was appointed by his successor, Keen Johnson, to the senate seat vacated by the death last week of M. M. Logan. Said Happy: "I will uphold the hand of the president."

Columbus a Bungler?

Spanish backers of Christopher Columbus were disappointed in his discovery of America, 447 years ago this week, because he brought back no cargoes of gold. And on his fourth voyage 10 years later—concludes Tulane university's Dr. Franz Blom, after studying reports written by the explorer's son—Columbus muffed his "supreme opportunity" to extricate himself from the "doghouse of disfavor."

Off Honduras, the son wrote, Columbus came upon a canoe loaded with natives and handicraft wares. The natives, Dr. Blom believes, were citizens of the fabulous Mayan empire, whose "astronomers, engineers and artists . . . made it the Greece of America." Columbus, ignoring the clue, turned back toward Europe.

Streamliner Sinks.

Anthony Fokker designs airplanes. Last year, he built his streamlined ideas into a $200,000 "yacht of tomorrow." Last week-end, off Yonkers, N. Y., it burned and sank in the Hudson river. A pair of honeymooners, who had borrowed the boat for a trip to Niagara Falls, leaped overboard and were rescued.

Up From Slavery.

As a boy slave in the Old South, Negro George Washington Carver once was swapped for a race horse. On Oct. 27, as "one of the foremost agricultural chemists in the country," Dr. Carver will receive one of the Theodore Roosevelt medals presented each year on TR's birthday.

MANSFIELD CLUB TO MARK ANNIVERSARY

Writer Turns Eyes Backward to Club Beginnings as Golden Jubilee Is Celebrated; Coming Events of Interest.

By FRANCES E. GENSLEY

THERE is perhaps no better place in the United States to witness the strides and developments in women's organizations than in Mansfield. Today let us turn our attention to the history of women's clubs, because on Monday the Round Table club will celebrate a golden anniversary with a jubilee tea at the Women's Club. In the year 1889 a group of about 25 women started the study club, and carried out a program on the order of an "arm chair trip abroad."

Looking Over the Week's Calendar.

During the current year the members are busy tracing the development and progress in human affairs during the past half century. This organization, like many others, was an outgrowth of the new demand for cooperation and popular education which followed the Civil war.

Previous to the nineteenth century associations for women were practically unknown, while the earliest were formed for religious and charitable purposes.

Between 1840 and 1850 the Daughters of Temperance began their activities, and this Tuesday (almost 100 years later) members of the Frances Willard chapter of the W. C. T. U. will have a meeting in Mansfield, and in 1868 the Sorosis (a club of which Mansfield has a branch) was formed. These groups gave impetus to the club movement, and many others were organized before the turn of the century.

So when Mrs. J. H. Todd presents the program Monday afternoon at the Club she will be openly marking a period of individual and general growth among women's organizations which has reached tremendous proportions throughout the world.

Music Study Clubs To Convene Here.

Another Monday event is the district convention of the Music Study clubs for which the Mansfield group will be hosts. Registration will be at 1 p. m. at the First Presbyterian church followed by a full day and evening program including a banquet at 6 o'clock at the church when state officers and guests will be introduced.

Complete details of the program have been announced on the Society pages of The Mansfield-News-Journal previously, but for those last minute lookers let me remind you of some of the outstanding features.

Officers who will speak at the opening session are Mrs. Gaillard B. Fuller, district president from Loudonville, Mrs. R. A. Herbruck, state president from Dayton, and Mrs. Paul Cropper, district vice president of this city. A business meeting and discussion will be held by representatives of the Ashland, Bellville, Loudonville, Mansfield, Perrysville, Tiffin, Upper Sandusky, Wooster and Willard clubs.

A group of Mansfield artists, Mrs. A. L. Twitchell, organist, Margaret Hall, pianist, and Jane Foltz, vocalist, will give a twilight concert at 4:45 p. m. after which the dinner will be served.

In the evening a concert will feature the Boy Violinists directed by Mrs. E. D. Gibson, district junior counsellor, Miriam Berg, Cleveland vocalist, and Harold Fink, Cleveland violinist. Numbers will be sung by the Tiffin Women's club chorus and the massed chorus of the clubs in the district. Myron E. Barnes is director of the former group and Miss Helen Beedelman is their accompanist, while Mrs. Roy I. Curry arranged the massed chorus work, and Prof. Neille O'Dell Rowe, Wooster, is director.

Mrs. Claude Ewing will direct locally and the Misses Louise Krause and Elizabeth Burneson will accompany.

It was announced this week by Mrs. K. E. Buhr, president of the Mansfield club, that members of non-federated music clubs from Bucyrus, Shelby, and Galion, and music lovers from all cities in the district will be welcomed at the sessions.

Gillilan to Give 'Confidential Confab.'

The first of next week will take the honors it appears. Tuesday morning the first lecture in the series will be given at 11 o'clock at the Ohio under the auspices of the Mansfield Federation of Women. Strickland Gillilan, who is referred to as "the nation's humorist," will be the guest speaker. And a personal aside from me to you. He really is a humorist, and he'll be the most welcome relief from all this talk of war, economic pressure, and panic that has crowded our ears during the past months.

His publicity explains that he will give "A Confidential Confab" in which "Strickland takes you on his knee and reasons with you like a Dutch Uncle. There are original poems interspersed."

Luncheon will follow at the Women's Club at 1 p. m. Reservations should be phoned to the club house by Monday evening, it was announced. Be seein' you at the Ohio then.

Mrs. Benninghoff, Dr. King Returning.

For several weeks now I have been telling you about the return of Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff, Cleveland, for a series of three book reviews. She will appear again under the auspices of the Women's Association of the First Congregational church.

Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. she will review "So Stands the Rock" by Anne Miller Downes. Either single admission tickets or season ducats will be available at the door, Mrs. John W. Graham told me the other day. Last year I was privileged to hear Mrs. Benninghoff in all three of her reviews, and she has a splendid delivery and a charming manner which I'm sure all of you will find irresistible. The programs will be given in the church auditorium.

Dr. J. L. King of Denison university, a Mansfield favorite, is going to come back to speak before members and guests of the Wednesday Study club. On this occasion, which marks the silver anniversary of the organization, Dr. King will talk on "Nationalism in American Literature."

Mrs. Ephraim Brown is hostess for the session.

The many other interesting and entertaining events scheduled for the coming week by the large number of Mansfield organizations are listed in the weekly Schedule of Events appearing elsewhere on this page from day to day.

'Soiless Growth' Topic Of Garden Group Talk

"Soiless Growth of Plants" was the title of the talk given by Mrs. John B. Conard yesterday at the luncheon meeting of the Cottage Garden club at the home of Mrs. Walter H. Goodenough, Lexington avenue. Mrs. J. F. Petree was associate hostess, and Mrs. J. H. Patton and Mrs. I. L. Bronson presided at the table.

Mrs. E. C. Frampton gave answers to the questions "What trees and shrubs attract birds? and Who was John Audobon and what is the Audobon society." The next meeting will be Oct. 27 at the home of Mrs. H. D. Smith with Mrs. Warren Fort assisting.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Oct. 15.

Sunday's horoscope is a very propitious one for all spiritual, religious, educational and philanthropic activities, although there are probabilities that suddenly-upset plans will demand revamping and re-organizing of a rather drastic force. But this will prove of definite benefit, with happy and desirable change of environs and associates. Social matters should flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of growth, expansion and fulfilled ambitions, with increased fortune and enhanced popularity, although such progress may call for new plans, place of residence and new contacts. It is a propitious time for putting over major programs, but with good judgment and sound advice from influential persons.

A child born on this day may be ambitious and efficient, and have much progressive and extraordinary idealism. But it may be erratic, restive and turbulent unless given early discipline and direction into constructive lines.

For Monday, Oct. 16.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a very lively day, with much enterprise and initiative, especially in new channels. But there may be trivial annoyances and obstructions. In social, romantic or domestic relations there may be peculiar or unaccountable developments, possibly of a sudden and spectacular nature. Impulsive or drastic actions may be hazardous to happiness.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a very active and exciting year, with swift-moving events despite small anxieties and impediments. The personal life seems to have a hint of rather thrilling or sensational developments unless handled circumspectly.

A child born on this day may be talented, resourceful, energetic and aggressive, and at the same time artistic, friendly and socially-inclined. It may be quick-tempered and impulsive despite its loving and kindly nature.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

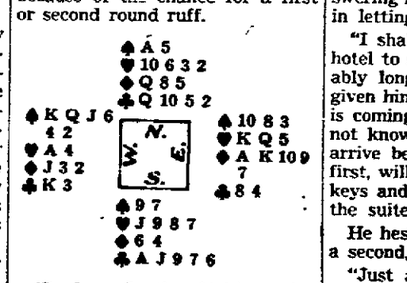
"The Authority on Authorities"

A FATAL CONVENTION

PROPERLY used, the "Ted Lightner slam doubling convention" is a deadly thing. Its purpose is not to increase the value of the one or two tricks by which the contract may be set, but to enhance the likelihood of beating the contract by commanding the partner to make an unorthodox lead, usually the suit bid by the player who becomes the dummy, because of the chance for a first or second round ruff.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

All the bidding on this hand was done by East and West. The latter called 1-Spade, East 2-Diamonds, West 2-Spades, East 4-Diamonds, West 5-Diamonds, East 5-Spades and West 6-Spades, which South doubled, chiefly because the bidding sounded weak to him.

Because of the double North led the dummy's suit, the diamond 5 and, when he got the lead again on the next trick with the spade A, he led the diamond 8. The declarer, expecting this to be ruffed, ducked, and the J won. Anybody could then run tricks in spades, hearts and clubs to make the slam.

Had South not doubled, North would have considered diamonds or spades the worst suits to lead, and the contract would almost surely have been beaten by the two black aces.

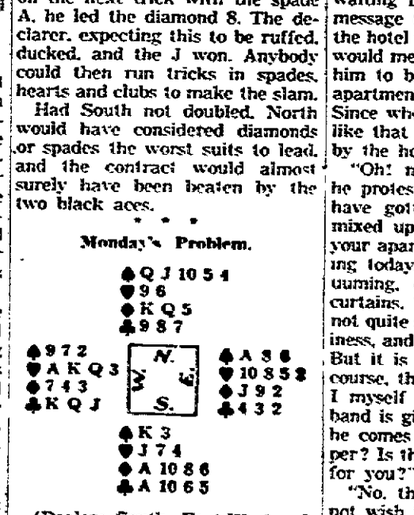
Monday's Problem.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

If South bids 1-Diamond here, West 1-Heart and North 1-Spade, what should East do?

The buffet luncheon table was centered by a cornucopia filled with fruit, and bouquets of fall flowers and bittersweet decorated the Hughes home. Mrs. Emerson Weller, retiring club president, poured, and Mrs. Sullens served the salad for luncheon.

Last evening the club members gave a dinner party for their husbands at Westbrook Country club. During the evening, Mrs. Hines and Mrs. W. J. Spreng showed motion pictures to the group. Mrs. McConnell, Mrs. A. L. Price and Mrs. Geipel were in charge of arrangements for this affair.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

THE telephone operator at the Hotel Lansfield was prompt in answering my call, and I lost no time in letting him know my errand.

"I shall be coming over to the hotel to stay the night, and probably longer," I said when I had given him my name. "My husband is coming to meet me there. I do not know whether or not he will arrive before me. If he comes in first, will you please give him the keys and tell him to go on up to the suite?"

He hesitated for the fraction of a second, then spoke hurriedly:

"Just a second! I will connect you with Mr. Milner."

"What?"I ejaculated hotly, but he already had transferred the call, and the next instant I heard the suave voice of the hotel manager.

"What can I do for you, Mrs. Graham?"

For a second or two anger choked my voice so that I could not speak. Then I said icily:

"You can tell me why it is that your telephone operator should offer me the insult of keeping me waiting for your approval of my message that I expected to be at the hotel tonight, that my husband would meet me, and that I wished him to be given the keys to the apartment if he came in first. Since when does a simple request like that call for formal approval by the hotel manager?"

"Oh! my dear Mrs. Graham!" he protested. "The operator must have gotten himself thoroughly mixed up. We have been giving your apartment a thorough cleaning today, washing windows, vacuuming, changing draperies and curtains. The man probably was not quite sure that it was in readiness, and wished to find out first. But it is all in readiness, and, of course, there is no other question. I myself will see that your husband is given the keys as soon as he comes in. Will you wish supper? Is there any order I can give for you?"

"No, thank you," I said. "I do not wish to give any order now."

"Perhaps when you come in," he said with imperturbable, good-humored courtesy. "Just let us know anything you wish."

"Thank you," I said crisply, and hung up the receiver without further speech. I had left the door to the bedroom open after I had consulted Harry and Lillian about the advisability of Dicky's coming to the apartment, and when I sat down in a chair near the telephone, Lillian came into the room, and, crossing to my side, held up my right arm.

"The winnah!" she intoned. "I couldn't help but hear the most important end of that phone conversation. Boy! did you tell 'em! I gather that Mr. and Mrs. Richard Graham are sojourning at the Lansfield this evening."

"Your inference is eminently correct," I told her, feeling my anger thaw under her nonsense.

"And what's next on the program?" she asked. "You look as if you'd settle down for a long, hard winter."

"I'm waiting for Dicky's call," I told her. "I asked him to call me back when I had had time to call the Lansfield. He said he would call in five minutes, but that it might be longer."

Her face was suddenly intent.

"Tell me!" she said. "How did he sound? Upset? Worried?"

"Yes, he did," I said slowly. "And he seemed so much relieved by my assurance that I would meet him at the hotel tonight."

Lillian nodded.

"And we'll be relieved to know that he's staying put for a few hours," she said a bit grimly. "Incidentally, Harry will see that there's a guard or two in the offing, so there'll be no dirty work at the crossroads for tonight, at least. I'll just go back to Harry and try to make him forget the pangs of hunger."

"Oh! I'm sorry," I interrupted. "But—"

"Don't give it a thought," she said comfortably. "My husband's tummy doesn't need any consideration. He coddles it enough already. But when he's hungry, he likes to have me around as a sort of whipping boy. So I'll just get back to him."

But the door had barely closed behind her when the telephone again shrilled, and I sprang to it, my pulses thrilling with the conviction that Dicky must again be on the wire.

Berlin Believes Sinking of Battleship Signals Start Of Bitter Conflict.

was sent to the bottom only a few hours after Hitler had reached the reluctant conclusion that Britain had "struck down my outstretched hand" was looked upon as a visible symbol of the intensity with which Nazi Germany will henceforth wage war.

The fuehrer remained in constant consultation with his key advisers, reaching the decision that the "third phase" in Europe's war had at last been reached.

The first was characterized as Germany's "essential" intervention in Poland, the second as Hitler's week of effort in behalf of peace and the third—that which prevails at present, as:

"Unceasing war against the western powers with the sole hope of peace lying outside of Germany and solely in the hands of neutral powers."

While the sinking of the Royal Oak signalized the intensity of war, foreign reports that the German army is poised for a telling thrust on the western front were not borne out by available information in Berlin.

It was admitted that many troops had been dispatched from Poland to the west, but it appeared premature to state that the reich armies on the west were on the point of any major action.

The German press today significantly ignored yesterday's statement of Dr. Otto Dietrich, Nazi press chief and a close confidant of Hitler, stressing the value of neutral intervention at the moment.

The newspapers also made no mention whatever of negative Washington reaction to the possibility of mediation by President Roosevelt. This action gave the impression that Hitler has no desire to make further peace moves from Berlin.

Hint at Parley of Germany, Russia, Italy.

BERLIN — (AP) — German, Russian and Italian leaders may meet somewhere in Italy to discuss the Allied refusal to end the war on Adolf Hitler's terms, well informed Nazi quarters reported today.

It was indicated no meeting had yet been decided upon, but that the question was being discussed in negotiations through diplomatic channels on what the Nazis called the insulting British rejection of Hitler's peace bid.

Nazis attached increasing importance to the visit to Italy of Henrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo, the Nazi secret police.

Himmler went to Italy ostensilby to discuss evacuation of German-blooded people from the Italian tyrol, but Nazis pointed out that such a visit would be made if Hitler proposed to go to Italy.

In any event, Nazis said, a three-power consultation would be held soon, in addition to the present negotiations through diplomatic channels. They said "common defense measures" would be discussed.

Humorist Speaks

Strickland Gillilan, nationally known humorist and shrewd political observer, is to be in Mansfield Tuesday for two speaking engagements. At 11 a. m. he is booked for "A Confidential Confab" with the Mansfield Federation of Women, at the Ohio theater, after which he will go to the Mansfield Leland hotel for the Rotary club's meeting, at which he promises to give Rotarians and their guests "the enlightenment they deserve." He will then leave for Cleveland for an evening meeting.

Chinese Say Warplanes 'Wiped Out' Japanese Airdrome.

CHUNGKING, China — (U.P.) — An official Chinese statement today said that three Chinese bombing planes had "wiped out" the airfield at Hankow, destroying almost 100 Japanese airplanes.

Then the Chinese craft engaged in a dog fight with Japanese pursuit planes over a distance of 200 miles in the direction of Ichang, the announcement said. Three Japanese pursuit planes were shot down during the battle.

orders a "blitzkrieg" offensive in the west.

The report shows clearly that the Polish high command had no information concerning Germany's intentions before the invasion started Sept. 1.

As a result, Poland had only 800,000 men under arms. She might have had nearly 5,000,000 had she mobilized in time.

Those 800,000 men were placed along a tenuous, 1,500-mile line from the Lithuanian frontier to Slovakia, and Germany's motorized might smashed through it in the first lightning-like thrusts.

Because of the Polish general staff's failure to anticipate German intentions, the report said, the Polish war industry was still an infant. Mass production of planes and tanks could not have been undertaken before the middle of 1940.

Before Polish reserves called up Aug. 31 could reach their garrisons, Germany had thrown 60 divisions, of which six were motorized and nine were armored, against 26 Polish divisions.

On Aug. 31 the Germans had 1,500 planes concentrated on the Polish frontier, but the Poles did not know it. On the morning of Sept. 1 these planes bombed more than 100 Polish towns and villages and virtually all of Poland's air fields and important railway junctions.

of the Cossacks and the gay, nonsense of young blacksmiths at their ringing forges.

There seemed to be no words, only music that had the quality and tone of a symphony orchestra.

This was most thrilling in the Rachmaninoff number and "The Evening Bells." The latter carried the ring and the vibrations of church bells which "remind the exile of his home, his childhood . . . and the bells he will never hear again." Nor did it take any stretch of the imagination last night to feel that this group of exiles were putting their own nostalgic longing into their music.

Serge Jaroff, the little conductor whose head was below the shoulders of his stalwart chorus, seemed to control them with his hands alone, hands which seemed to be running over the keys of an organ.

An enthusiastic audience greeted warmly each member, and there seemed to be no let-down in applause during the entire concert. Unexpected treats came with the Russian dagger dance during a number, and the final encore which was the always-thrilling "Volga Boatmen" song.

The chorus was introduced by Rev. David N. Roller, president of the Civic Music association, who announced the other numbers which are the National Symphony on Jan. 29, and Gladys Swarthout on March 11. Of particular interest to the membership ticket holders was the announcement that Marian Anderson will sing at Sandusky Dec. 9, and there are several hundred seats available to Mansfield members whose tickets are good in other cities.

LEGACY OF LOVE + + + + + +

By KATHRN BEMIS

(Copyright, 1939)

CHAPTER XXX

He had no wish to inform this uninterested auditor that he had no idea Yvette Verne had ever possessed a husband. He suddenly remembered that Craig knew Yvette's secret,—or Avis'. He would go back to Silver Hill and make Craig tell all. He would say that he knew about the pending divorce and he felt entitled to a full explanation.

He would say further, that he could have learned all the truth from Mr. Grimsby, but that he scorned to do so, preferring to learn it from Craig. After that, he would be guided, as to his demeanor by the response Craig made to his request.

Stone rose, without haste, and said:

"I thank you, sir, for this audience. Good afternoon."

On his way back, Stone pondered deeply on the amazing mystery of Yvette Verne. He couldn't make it out. Did she let herself become engaged to Harley Madison when she already was married? Did she mean to procure a divorce in time to enable her to marry Madison?

In such case, she most certainly had no hand in the killing of the man. Did her husband, in a jealous rage, come to Silver Hill that night, get in somehow, and kill Madison himself?

Each theory sounded more absurd than the one before. Determinedly, Stone put the subject from him until he could confer with Craig. He forced his mind to dwell upon what he considered the prime factor in the case.

How could any one get into and out of that locked room? Well, of course, there was the door with the spring bolt to get out of, but how to get in?

In a flash of inspiration, he said, almost aloud:

"Mightn't have to get in; might already be in'"

• • •

This idea was not entirely new, they had mentioned Craig's hiding in the coat closet, or somebody crouching behind the big davenport. But it took new hold on Stone's imagination and he dallied with it, to no real purpose, but as a definite possibility.

He reached the Madison house at cocktail hour, and joined the group in the living-room. They were discussing Hetty's funeral, which would be held the next day.

Owing to the position of trust and honor the woman had held, Cornelia decreed that the services should be held in the house, as Harley Madison's had been. Her two nephews agreed, and the arrangements were completed.

Cornelia decreed that it should be a proper and befitting funeral and she missed Hetty sadly, in looking after the details.

The evening dragged. Craig was like a ship without a rudder, in the absence of Avis, and Cornelia had not made good her promise to find the girl.

Fleming Stone had about concluded to take Craig aside and talk it over with him, when Sutton came, full of excitement and sure of a new quarry.

"I've found 'the murderer,' he cried.

"Be [illegible] quiet" Craig said, shar[illegible]ember Miss Madison is pres[illegible]

"Yes, well'" said Sutton unawed: "I rather guess she'll be glad to learn it's none of the family. That right, Miss Madison?"

"Tell your story, Mr. Sutton," Cornelia said, in her kindly way. "Who is your suspect?"

"Not a suspect ma'am, the criminal! Yes, just that."

"Go on," Stone said, showing a trifle of impatience, "who is he?"

"Hendricks, of course! Job Hendricks. Don't you remember, Potter saw him coming over here with a long ladder? Well, he did, —we found the ladder."

"Go easy, Sutton," Stone advised. "Mr. Hendricks was questioned about that ladder, a good while ago. It seems he was coming over here to make a friendly call on Mr. Madison, and chose the ladder way in."

"A friendly call? Huh! Well, he's the man, all the same."

"How do you know?" asked Stone; "has he confessed?"

"Same as! He's run away! Disappearance means guilt, every time!"

"Well, you can't arrest him, if he's run away."

"Oh, come now, Mr. Stone, you're miffed because you didn't nail him when you had a chance. Own up, now."

"Hold hard, there, Sutton." Stone smiled: "I left the village people to you, you know. I wouldn't interfere with your arrests. And too, I wouldn't arrest Job Hendricks, if he was the last man on earth."

"You wouldn't! Why not?"

"Because he didn't kill Mr. Madison."

"Who did, then?"

"I don't know; but since you seem so deeply interested, I'll tell you that I shall know very soon, and that's no idle promise."

"I hope you will, Mr. Stone," Cornelia said, her pathetic voice arousing sympathy in all who heard it.

Even Sutton was affected, and he rose to go, saying:

"I won't stay longer, Miss Madison; I hope I haven't offended you by this unexpected call."

"Oh, no, Mr. Sutton; I am quite ready to meet any emergencies. But don't arrest that poor Mr. Hendricks, unless you are very sure of his guilt. I don't see how he could get into my brother's room."

With a brief good night, Sutton went away.

Craig took the initiative and asked Stone, on the way upstairs, to stop in his room a minute. So the detective went in with him, and Craig burst into a storm of questions.

"I had a hunch you went to New York today, to find out about Avis. Did you?"

"What do you mean? To find out about Avis?"

"Everything. You have called her mysterious. Didn't you go to some one to help you solve the mystery?"

"I'll tell you frankly, I wanted to do that,—ask for the solution of the mystery, I mean, — but, well, I disliked to ask a stranger, and I thought I'd rather ask you."

He stopped, to note Craig's reaction to this speech.

But there was none. Young Madison just stared at him and waited.

Stone went on:

"I am sure what we call mystery is no mystery to you. If there is anything to be explained about Miss Verne, you know all about it; and that is as it should be. But it would be kinder to your aunt, and helpful to me, if you would tell us what it's all about."

"I wish I could—" Craig began, and stopped.

"Because of a promise?"

"Because of another's promise. And, I say, Stone, upon the honor of a Madison, there is nothing in the mystery, as you call it, about Miss Verne, that had the very slightest bearing on the death of my uncle."

"Then why—"

"Oh, there are lots of other reasons. You see—"

"I can't see things, unless you tell me," Stone said, after waiting for Craig to complete his speech. "Answer this, then: Do you think it a proper, a decent thing—for a girl to be engaged to a man, and within a week of his death, become engaged to his nephew?"

Craig looked very grave, even solemn, as he replied:

"It is all right in our case, Mr. Stone. You do not understand."

"Tell me, then, so that I can understand.

"I will tell you when Avis comes back here. If she never comes, I shall never tell you,—nor anyone else."

It was Tuesday morning. The funeral services for Hetty Garson were to be held at eleven o'clock, and shortly before that hour the family and most of the servants were in their places.

Many people came, some from friendly feelings toward the family, and some from curiosity, hoping to learn something about the tragedies that had come to the dwellers at Silver Hill.

Late the night before, Stone had received the report from Guy Prentiss about the latent fingerprints on the pages of the detective story, and to the detective's deep regret, it was just what he had expected.

At the opening of the service, Stone sat in a chair near the hall door, and during the first prayer, he slipped silently from the room, and went to the servants' sitting room. As most of the staff were paying their last respects to Hetty, there was no one around except a few necessary caretakers, and one big, husky man, to whom Stone beckoned.

Jim Green he was, and Stone went with him to the basement rooms. Everything was in the same perfect order that marked the whole house, and knowing what was wanted, Green led the detective to a small room, containing piled up boxes and barrels.

"This here bar'l is the one you want," he said, "it holds the dump of the waste baskets."

"Kept separate from other rubbish?" Stone asked.

"Yes, sir, Miss Madison, she has everything just so, and it's my place to watch out that nothing goes wrong. This barrel will be emptied into the big incinerator Thursday. Now, what do you want I should do?"

"I want to look through the barrel, to find something that was thrown into a waste basket, probably on Sunday, day before yesterday. How do we go about it?"

The big man upended the barrel, and scattered the contents over the floor, until perhaps a third of the bulk was out.

"Seen it yet?" he asked as Stone scanned the papers.

"No,—it may be a sort of bundle, or a box. Shake out a few more."

Green became interested, and let some more papers fall out of the barrel.

"Hold off," said Stone and picked up a small bundle wrapped in white tissue paper. He partially opened it, and nodded his head slowly.

A Farmer's Diary

The Squirrel Hunter.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE cool October landscape was flecked with white patches of frost this morning. I walked along the edge of my neighbor's woods, and saw a hunter seated within a screen of brush. He wore the familiar yellow-tan garb and his leather boots stood out prominently. There he sat, secluded and motionless, with gun in readiness. The sun was not yet up. I left him there without a greeting, lest I might disturb his watch. I read keen delight and expectation upon his broad clean shaven face—the hope of bagging some fine squirrels before they knew he was about.

But as I left the woods I heard the shrill scream of a jay and off to the left a chipmunk began to chatter. I smiled, for well I knew those warning calls. The wildfolk knew, now, that a hunter was about, and it would be a test of patient waiting between hunter and hunted. That damp cold log upon which the huntsman sat would not be inspiring—but hunger might force the squirrels out in search of food, in early morning.

The fragrance of the woods was captivating. The odor of growing mold beneath wet leaves was almost visible. The level rays of sunlight penetrated the dark recesses beneath the trailing branches. A steamy mist rose above the little hollows of the narrow field between the woodland and my home. I envied that secluded hunter. It was not really for game that he had come. That was merely a smoke screen. He was following that primitive urge for elemental things. The call of the wild had touched his very soul, and there he sat strangely delighted, in spite of physical discomfort, alone upon a log.

In about an hour I heard a shot, and saw three leaves drop from the side of a tree. Then, from a top branch, a larger gray object fell to a lower branch, and finally reached the ground. The hunter hurried to the spot, and I saw him hesitate as he looked at his kill. Reluctantly he grabbed a club and hit the struggling animal, then placed it inside his coat and came toward our house.

As he came up I saw that he was nervous and concerned.

"I've had a bad experience," he said. "I wounded a squirrel in the hind quarters, and when I came up to him, there he lay upright among the leaves, begging for mercy. I could hardly kill him. Now I'm going home. Here"— he laid the squirrel carefully upon the grass in our backyard—"you cook him for your family."

97-Yard Gallop Wins for Rams

Bud Barber Runs Length of Field After Pass Interception to Give Madison 13 to 6 Victory.

By OSCAR RUHL

GRABBING a pass sailing toward enemy hands on the three-yard line, Bud Barber outsprinted a horde of tacklers for 97 yards and a touchdown early in the fourth period to give Al Fendrick's Madison Rams a 13 to 6 decision over a heavier Upper Sandusky eleven under the suburban school's arcs last night before a few hundred chilled spectators.

The return of the interception of Frank Robey's pitch into touchdown territory climaxed the scoring in a hard-fought setto which found both clubs threatening frequently.

Upper Sandusky tacklers never had a chance to lay their mitts on Barber as he raced down the south sideline ahead of an army of teammates which formed a protective ring around the flying figure. Doug DeNero then plunged through center to account for the extra point.

In scoring their second triumph in five games, the battlin' Rams staged a great defensive battle. The Fendrickmen were forced to make a number of gallant goal line stands to ward off Upper Sandusky touchdowns.

Offensively, Madison was ragged in the first half, and it was only the play of the forwards which held the visitors in tow. Numerous fumbles caused most of Madison's grief.

After the second half kickoff, the Rams settled down and presented a brand of football that they have not matched at any time this season.

While Barber's game-winning touchdown run featured the tight game, Capt. Bill Heichel produced the neatest bit of open field running at the start of the second half.

Taking the kick-off on his 21, the Rams' leader weaved, dodged and broke through the entire Upper Sandusky club to the visitors' 30 where he was brought down from behind.

This brilliant run set the stage for the first Madison score. On the third play, Bob Matthes tossed a pass to DeNero in the end zone to knot the count, 6-all.

* * *

Upper Sandusky turned a Madison bobble into a touchdown early in the second period, Francis Hetzel pitching to Robey from the eight after the recovery on the 20.

* * *

Madison was outplayed in the first half, and threatened the goal line only once. On one drive, the Rams went into pay dirt twice, but both touchdown plunges were ruled out because of penalties. The Rams yielded the ball on the one as the half ended.

Possessing a dangerous passing attack, the visitors held the edge in first downs, 12 to 9.

Jackets Also Score First Points as They Trim Galion, 24-0, in N. C. O. Game.

GALION—The Mt. Vernon Yellow Jackets scored their first touchdowns and victory here last night when they walloped Galion, 24 to 0, in an N. C. O. conference game.

The Jackets tallied their first score of the season in the second period when Crumrine dove across 10 yards on a spinner. A Conkle-to-Weiss pass provided the second score in the third period.

Thompson intercepted a pass and raced 82 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter. Rouse passed to Sheffer for the final score after recovering a fumble. The nearest Galion came to the goal line was the 16 in the final frame.

Ashland, after recovering a Wooster fumble on the opening kickoff, drove straight over for a score. Paxton took a pass from Dalton in the end zone. The Ashlanders added a touchdown in the second and third periods, and scored a safety in the final quarter.

Wooster, which defeated the Madison Rams earlier this year, were on their heels most of the time, but managed to push over a score in the third. Woods tallied the lone marker from the six.

Plymouth Tops Shiloh, 18 to 0

PLYMOUTH Paced by Keith Kircher, the Plymouth high combine defeated Shiloh high, 18 to 0, in a six-man football game here yesterday. It was the opening game for both teams.

Kircher broke into the scoring column in the opening period when he scooped a Shiloh fumble and ran 35 yards for a score. He ended the scoring in the third by tallying on a five-yard pass. Richard Hofman caught a 15-yard pass for the other touchdown in the second period. Shiloh never threatened, playing most of the contest in its own territory.

Bantams Tackle Akron Eleven At Blue Goose Field Sunday

SUNDAY football-goers who like their entertainment fast and furious will not be disappointed if they make a trip to Blue Goose field tomorrow.

At 2:30 p. m. Sunday, the Adams Bantams will make their home debut against the South Akron Merchants on the Wooster road field, vacated for one day by the Automotive Supplies, who play the Euclid Spartans in Cleveland.

* * *

Although beaten in two games, the Mansfield midgets have presented a fine brand of football this season, and are expected to develop into a dangerous outfit before the campaign is concluded.

Coach Hank Richards and his assistant, Joe Zimmerman, stressed improvement in the Adams' passing attack in practice this week, and the club may win if its passes click as its running game shows possibilities.

The Mansfield team will probably line up with Kurik and Bosko, ends; P. Hallabrin and Martin, tackles; Krupp and Miller, guards, and Jerger, center. Edwards, Bush, Wise and F. Hallabrin will fill the backfield.

This One Didn't Count, But Madison Won, 13-6

Doug DeNero, hard-running Madison high school back, is shown crossing the goal line late in the second period in the Rams' game with Upper Sandusky on the Madison field last night . . . but the touchdown did not count, the officials ruling both sides offside. Madison, however, came back in the second half to win, 13 to 6.

This Madison rooter was prepared for any kind of weather, good or bad. The straw hat was a protection against the rain, which fell at the start of the game. Later, however, when it turned cold, he would willingly have exchanged the straw chapeau for a fur-lined cap.

This photo shows the Madison cheer leaders grouped together in an attempt to ward off the chilly blasts between cheers.

Supplies Seek Victory No. 4 In Cleveland

McMullen Sends Unbeaten Club Against Spartans.

Coach Earl McMullen and his Automotive Supplies have cut out a big job for themselves Sunday.

They travel to Cleveland where they meet the strong Euclid Spartans at Euclid Shore high field, and no easy assignment awaits them.

* * *

Organized for eight seasons, the Euclid team boasts a record of 65 victories, seven defeats and three ties, and promises to add to the brilliant record this year.

Len Sadosky, former All-Ohioan at Ohio U., is head coach. He is assisted by Harold Jantz, former Columbia star.

Victorious over the Akron O'Neils, Richwood Merchants and Canton Merchants in games to date, the Supplies will be seeking their fourth straight triumph Sunday.

* * *

McMullen announced today that his club is in good condition for the game, but refused to comment on victory possibilities. "We're ready for a battle, though," McMullen said.

Canton Loses, Ashland Wins

Massillon Trounces Alliance, Keeps Record Unmarred.

Only one of the two future Mansfield high Tyger opponents in action last night emerged with a victory. It was Ashland high and it upset the erstwhile unbeaten Wooster high combine, 22 to 6, at Ashland. Canton McKinley, the other club in action, suffered its second setback of the season by bowing to Warren, 31 to 6.

Massillon high's powerhouse, which handed the Tygers a 73-0 beating, pushed on towards another undefeated season by smothering Alliance, 47 to 0, before 16,000 fans. In scoring the win, Massillon halted Alliance's spectacular Hills Hume. It was the first time this season Hume has failed to tally at least one touchdown.

Massillon, led by Roscoe Clendenning, subbing for Bill Zimmerman, scored in every period to trounce Alliance. The Tigers tallied 27 points in the final quarter. Clendenning punched over two markers for the winners. It marked the first time this season Alliance has been scored on.

Shelby and Akron Kenmore, two other future Tyger rivals, were idle last night.

Centerburg Given Victory on Protest

CENTERBURG — Centerburg high school gridders were awarded a 1 to 0 forfeit victory over the Danville Blue Devils in the annual game here yesterday.

Officials John Kabcalo, former Ohio State star, and A. G. Kauber awarded the game to Centerburg in the fourth period when it is said that Coach Cy Senft of Danville, ex-Mansfield high mentor, refused to leave the field after protesting a penalty.

Centerburg was leading 6 to 0 when the game was forfeited. Thompson scoring in the first period.

Hang Up Fifth Straight Wins

Onondagas Wallop Tiffin Champions, 24 to 6, Bluejays Trounce Mt. Gilead, 26 to 0.

By CHARLES MARTIN

CRESTLINE HIGH'S ONONDAGAS roared on toward their first undefeated season since 1936 by walloping the erstwhile unbeaten Tiffin Calvert combine, 24 to 6, before a capacity gathering under the floodlights at Community stadium in a League of Six Nations contest last night.

With Phil Ganni leading the way, the crack Crestline aggregation punched over touchdowns in all but the second period to hand Calvert its initial setback.

Coach Merle Hutson's proteges, performing smoothly from the Notre Dame system of play, contributed some brilliant blocking to enable the Onondagas' "touchdown twins," Ganni and Bob Frye, to break loose for three of the club's touchdowns.

Whatever ambitions the Senecas had of remaining in the ranks of the state's unbeaten grid teams were blasted when Ganni galloped 66 yards around left end in the third period to score standing up. That touchdown, Ganni's second of the evening, gave Crestline an 18-6 lead.

* * *

Ganni started the Crestline outfit on its way to victory No. 5 by racing 85 yards down the sidelines in the initial quarter for the opening touchdown.

A few minutes later, Frye, on a reverse, went over left end from the Tiffin 15 to give Crestline a 12-0 lead. That advantage was never seriously threatened.

Tiffin, however, early in the second half, unleashed a desperate attack that netted a touchdown, but it was the only time it seriously threatened.

John Scheiber, the visitors' principal ground gainer, tallied that lone marker from the one-yard stripe. His attempted plunge for the point was stopped cold by the hard-charging Crestline line.

Burno Moleno and Stump combined to give Crestline its final marker of the affair in the fourth period. The halfback tossed a 27-yard aerial to Stump, who went over from the 10 unmolested. Frye's attempted placement went wide.

* * *

Tiffin came storming back in the fading seconds of the game to tally five first downs in a row, but Ganni put a stop to the threat when he tackled the Calvert ball carrier on the five. Crestline held the ball for a moment, but Tiffin came charging back to the Crestline 35 as the gun ended the game.

Although Tiffin held the edge in first downs, 8 to 4, it was unable to break loose its ball carriers for any lengthy gains. The Calvert passing attack was the principal weapon in marking up the first downs.

The opening quarter of the contest was played in a driving rain, but it stopped before causing either club any damage in handling the pigskin. It was Crestline's final home appearance of the season.

Green Youngster Stars for Bellville.

A FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD youth, who had never played a game of football before this year, sparked the attack yesterday that enabled the Bluejays of Bellville high to remain in the select list of undefeated and untied Ohio elevens.

He is Richard Keiser, a hard-charging ball packer, who is handling the important fullback position for Coach Royd Hodge's eleven this year.

Keiser smashed through for two touchdowns as the Bluejays registered a 26 to 0 triumph over Mt. Gilead at Bellville. It was Bellville's fifth straight victory.

While Mt. Gilead set its defense to halt Capt. Howard Hamilton's touchdown sprints, Keiser caused the Indians a lot of trouble with his powerful off-tackle drives.

Hamilton, the team's leading individual scorer, however, manager to gallop 28 yards on a reverse in the third frame to add six points to his season's total.

Bellville tallied twice in the first stanza to take a lead it never relinquished as it whitewashed the Indians. Keiser lugged the ball 44 yards in three plays into Mt. Gilead pay-dirt. He climaxed the drive by knifing through center from the Indian's half-yard stripe. Hamilton's placement for the point was blocked.

Don Palm, who does most of the passing for Hodge's club, was an important factor in the second score a few minutes later. He shot a forward to Hamilton, who lattered to Russell Leedy and he scampered over standing up. The play started from the Mt. Gilead 28. Hamilton's kick was wide.

Early in the second frame Hamilton contributed his touchdown by sweeping right end from the Indians' 28. Hamilton fired an aerial to Bill Martin for the point.

And then, after halting a Mt. Gilead touchdown threat on the seven, the Bluejays came back in the third period to finish their touchdown parade. Keiser hit the center of the line from the one-yard marker to top a 77-yard march. Hamilton's kick was low.

* * *

Bellville drove to the Mt. Gilead 12 late in the final period, but a 15-yard penalty stopped the threat. Hamilton tallied another marker in the second period, but an offside penalty against Bellville nullified the score. The two combines tallied eight first downs apiece.

Red Birds Bow To Spartans

Millersburg Outplays Foe To Win, 25 To 0.

MILLERSBURG—A crowd of 1,100 watched Millersburg's Spartans deliver a 25 to 0 "blitzkreig" to the Loudonville Red Birds here last night.

The first Spartan score came midway in the opening stanza when Leppla skirted his own right end from the seven. Millersburg's second tally came late in the second period after an aerial attack placed the oval on the Birds' one. Steurmer plunged for the score. Threatening again in the closing moments of the first half, the Spartans again placed the ball on the one as the half ended.

* * *

Millersburg placed the ball in scoring position twice in the third period, but penalties and a stubborn Red Bird wall held them scoreless.

* * *

An aerial bombardment in the early minutes of the final stanza gave the Spartans their third tally as Steurmer passed to Lydic in the end zone. The same combination completed a pass for the point. Four successive passes from midfield placed the ball on the 10 yard stripe from which Steurmer plunged for the final score.

Butler Beaten By Fredericktown.

THE Butler high Bulldogs ran into one bad period here yesterday and came out on the short end of an 18 to 6 score in a gridiron tussle with Fredericktown high.

Butler, battling to register its initial triumph of the season, jumped into the lead in the second period and the way it halted the heavier Freddies it looked like the Bulldogs might win.

But Fredericktown came rushing back in the third, and with Stanley Gregg leading the way, tallied three times in rapid succession to turn the tide. Wilson gave Butler its touchdown on a six-yard plunge in the second chapter.

The Freddies marched 80 yards in eight plays after taking the opening kickoff after the intermission with Gregg smashing over from the eight. A little later Weller went over from the Butler 11, and Gregg finished it up by ploughing 10 yards for the final marker.

THEATERS

Hollywood Cavalcade.

Through the lives of two people, a prop boy who became a director and a singer who became "America's Sweetheart," 20th Century-Fox looks backward at the development of one of the world's greatest industries, motion pictures. Those who have watched this development over a period of 30 years may recognize some of the great figures of the industry who inspired the characters. Certainly it wouldn't be difficult to guess that the Don Ameche role was inspired by Mack Sennett, creater of the Bathing Beauties and the Keystone Kops. Nor would it be too difficult to guess the identity of "America's Sweetheart," played by Alice Faye, although the screen love affair between these two is purely fictional. "Hollywood Cavalcade," which opened at the Ohio today, is the first picture of the industry which doesn't satirize it or poke fun at it.

"Dust Be My Destiny."

Priscilla Lane and John Garfield, both of whom made their first bid for movie fame in "Four Daughters" and followed in "Daughters Courageous" are teamed in "Dust Be My Destiny," the film version of Jerome Oldum's popular novel. Garfield is seen as a boy just released from prison who is sent to the county work farm when he is picked up for vagrancy. There he meets a girl whose step-father is manager of the farm. Both are starved for happiness and normal lives and something to which to pin their faith. Hounded by destiny they take to the road and join America's vast army of migratory people, and begin a battle for the right to live decently and normally.

"Bachelor Mother."

The screen's best "dance girl" has had a difficult time proving that she can act as well as dance, but there hasn't been much questioning of the fact since Ginger Rogers made "Bachelor Mother" and "Fifth Avenue Girl." And David Niven, who has made a good showing in supporting roles, blossoms out as a very acceptable leading man and comedian, in "Bachelor Mother," the Park theater attraction for the first of the week, starting tomorrow. The romantic comedy begins when a working girl notices a baby lying on the steps of a foundling home and picks it up—just as the door opens. From then on she wages an amusing battle—amusing to the audience—to prove that it isn't hers. Tailspin Tommy in "Sky Patrol" is a second feature.

"Man About Town."

Her producer didn't keep Dorothy Lamour out of sarongs very long, just about long enough to wear some lovely clothes in "Man About Town" in which the shapely star is teamed with Jack Benny and Edward Arnold. Not only does the picture give Dorothy more conventional attire than she is used to in her screen life, but it gives Benny the best screen opportunity he has had to date. He plays a straight leading man role, that of the show producer who was in love with his feminine star but too bashful to tell her so. The song hit is "Strange Enchantment" and other players are Binnie Barnes, Phil Harris and Betty Grable. "The Kid From Kokomo" gets its laughs from Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien, Wayne Morris and May Robson. They're both at the Ritz.

"Made for Each Other."

There isn't anything "de luxe" about this picture — except the stars — for it is an everyday story of everyday people. Two young people fall in love and marry on a shoe string and then there is a baby and then a mother-in-law to be supported. And of course there are quarrels and the baby becomes seriously ill. Carole Lombard and James Stewart are seen as John and Jane Mason. A second attraction brings "The Duke of West Point" to the Majestic, in which Louis Hayward, Tom Brown and Richard Carlson are a sort of Three Musketeers of the United States army training school. Joan Fontaine is the girl.

LEGAL NOTICE

John Nottom and Frances Nottom, whose last known place of residence and address was Route 2, Clayton, Wisconsin, will take notice that on October 6, 1939, the undersigned filed his petition in The Common Pleas Court of Richland County, Ohio, alleging that the above named defendants have or claim to have an interest in the following described real estate:

Situated in the County of Richland, in the State of Ohio, and in the City of Mansfield and bounded and described as follows: Being lot number Thirty-seven Hundred and ninety-nine (3799) of the consecutive numberings of lniots to the City of Mansfield, Ohio.

The undersigned further alleges that he and his predecessors in title have held the open, notorious, adverse, exclusive, continuous and actual possession of said premises for more than 21 years last past; that defendants, John Nottom and Frances Nottom, signed a quit-claim deed to plaintiff for such interest on or about May 13, 1939, but failed to appear before a Notary Public for acknowledgment of the signatures and did not have the same witnessed by two witnesses as required by law. Plaintiff has ever since sought to have this omission corrected, but with due diligence has been unable to find or contact said defendants, and that said deficiency is a cloud upon plaintiff's title to these premises.

The prayer of the petition is that the defendants and each of them may be lawfully notified of the pendency of this action and duly summoned to appear and answer herein, setting forth the nature and extent of their several claims in and to the real estate hereinbefore described; and that the Court may adjudge all of said claims to be illegal and void; that the plaintiff's title to all the premises above described may be quieted, and that the plaintiff may be found and adjudged to be the owner in fee simple of said premises and that the defendants, and each of them, and any and all persons claiming under them, may be forever enjoined and debarred from hereafter asserting any right, title, interest, claim or demand in, or to, said premises or any part thereof, and for such other and further relief as is proper.

That the defendants are required to answer by November 18, 1939, and this cause will be for hearing on or any time thereafter.

Examine this table. It shows that $4.46 a month repays everything on a $100 loan in 30 months. The faster you pay, the less the total cost. These payments are calculated at Household's new reduced rates of 2½% monthly on balances up to $300 and 6% yearly on balances over $300 to $500. These rates are less than legal maximum, and are the same to everyone—one price to all. Only borrowers sign—no endorsers on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives.
